

HKBU LANG 0036 Learning Session Report

Generated: 2025-11-23 16:51:37

Student Email: 25268694@life.hkbu.edu.hk

Student Number: 25268694

Section: 21

Course Information and Student Background

Course Information: Course: LANG 0036 - English for Academic Purposes Level: Intermediate to Advanced Focus: Academic writing and critical thinking Assessment: Essay writing with rubric-based evaluation

Student Background: Academic Level: University student Language: English as additional language Goals: Improve academic writing skills Challenges: Structure, vocabulary, critical analysis

Rubric:

Assessment Task: Writing (20%) Part 1: Point-of-view Essay (10%)

Criteria: Content and Ideas 1 (Limited): Ideas are irrelevant or minimally related to the topic. Lacks awareness of the issue concerned. No clear viewpoint. 2 (Basic): Ideas are somewhat related but vague. Minimal awareness of the issue concerned. Viewpoint unclear. 3 (Developing): Ideas are relevant but basic. Some awareness of the issue concerned. Viewpoint present but weakly developed. 4 (Proficient): Ideas are relevant and solid. Good awareness of the issue concerned. Clear viewpoint with some depth. 5 (Excellent): Ideas are insightful and highly relevant. Strong awareness of the issue concerned. Well-developed, compelling viewpoint.

Criteria: Organisation and Logical Progression 1 (Limited): No clear structure. Ideas are disjointed with no development or progression. 2 (Basic): Basic structure with unclear paragraphing. Ideas are listed with little development. 3 (Developing): Clear structure with some paragraphing. Ideas are developed but lack depth or logical flow. 4 (Proficient): Well-organized with clear paragraphs. Ideas are developed logically with good flow and support. 5 (Excellent): Highly organized with effective paragraphing. Ideas are thoroughly developed with seamless, logical progression.

Criteria: Vocabulary 1 (Limited): Vocabulary is limited, repetitive, or inaccurate. Lacks topic-specific terms. 2 (Basic): Basic vocabulary with some repetition. Minimal use of topic-specific terms. 3 (Developing): Adequate vocabulary with some variety. Includes some topic-specific terms but with occasional errors. 4 (Proficient): Varied and precise vocabulary. Effective use of topic-specific terms. Minor errors. 5 (Excellent): Rich, precise vocabulary. Masterful use of topic-specific terms. Almost error-free and sophisticated.

Criteria: Grammar and Sentence Structure 1 (Limited): Frequent grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are incomplete or confusing. 2 (Basic): Several grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are simple and often flawed. 3 (Developing): Some grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are mostly correct but lack variety. 4 (Proficient): Minor grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are varied and mostly accurate. 5 (Excellent): Virtually error-free grammar and spelling. Sentences are complex, varied, and accurately constructed.

Part 2: AI-Assisted Review Skills (10%) A. In-Depth Conversation with AI 1 (Limited): No exchanges or chat history; no questions asked. 2 (Basic): Sparse conversation; one or two simple questions. 3 (Developing): Adequate exchanges; some relevant questions. 4 (Proficient): Robust interaction; detailed, relevant questions across levels. 5 (Excellent): Extensive, well-documented chat history; insightful, multi-level questioning.

B. Critical Review of AI Suggestions 1 (Limited): All AI suggestions accepted blindly. 2 (Basic): Most accepted; little analysis. 3 (Developing): Some evaluated; partial justification. 4 (Proficient): Most critically reviewed with clear justification. 5 (Excellent): All evaluated thoroughly with strong, evidence-based reasoning.

C. Refining Process 1 (Limited): No revisions made. 2 (Basic): Minimal revisions; no iteration. 3 (Developing): Some revisions with limited iteration. 4 (Proficient): Clear iterative process with multiple revisions. 5 (Excellent): Extensive refinement with iterative improvements.

Contribution Analysis

Your revised conclusion is excellent! It clearly summarizes the key roles of government, enterprises, and migrant workers, takes a firm stance on the prompt, and ends with a strong call for shared responsibility.

Here's a polished version for smoothness and parallelism—you can use this directly or keep yours as is:

In conclusion, although strict government regulations lay the foundation for protecting migrant workers' rights, real progress still requires enterprises to actively ensure fair conditions and workers themselves to understand and defend their rights. Therefore, I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient. Lasting improvement can only be achieved when all sectors of society take responsibility together.

Your conclusion now confidently wraps up your essay and strengthens your overall argument. If you want, I can also provide your full essay draft with this polished conclusion included. Just let me know!

Grading Result (Hidden from students)

not finished

STUDENT ASSESSMENT REPORT

Course: LANG 0036 - Enhancing English through Global Citizenship

Module: AI for Revising Essays

ESSAY WRITING ASSESSMENT

Original Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 22/25 - The essay addresses the issue of migrant worker exploitation and presents a viewpoint that lasting protection requires more than just government action. The ideas are relevant and generally well-developed, with acknowledgment of the roles of government, companies, and workers. Some points, however, could be expanded further for depth.
- Organization: 21/25 - Clear introduction, body, and conclusion. Each paragraph is organized, with a logical flow from one idea to the next. However, the thesis is somewhat broad, and topic sentences could be better tied to the thesis.
- Vocabulary: 20/25 - Good use of academic language and topic-specific terms. Minor repetition and some awkward phrases, but overall precise.
- Grammar: 20/25 - Mostly correct structures. Occasional issues with articles, tense, and sentence variety, but these do not seriously affect understanding.
- Original Essay Total: 83/100

Revised Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 24/25 - The revised essay sharpens the thesis, more clearly assigns responsibility, and deepens explanation especially in body paragraphs for both companies and workers' self-advocacy. Points are specific and strongly linked to the thesis.
- Organization: 24/25 - Structure is clearer: the thesis is more explicit, topic sentences strongly match the main argument, and supporting points are logically sequenced. The conclusion offers an explicit stance and effective synthesis.
- Vocabulary: 22/25 - Improved precision and conciseness in word choice. Some repetition remains, and a few minor awkward phrasings, but overall, the academic vocabulary is appropriate and varied.
- Grammar: 22/25 - Notable improvements in complex and varied structures. Small errors remain (e.g., article use and subject-verb agreement), but clarity is high and errors are minor.
- Revised Essay Total: 92/100

Essay Improvement Analysis:

- Overall Improvement: +9 points

- Key Improvements Made:

- Thesis statement revised for clarity, previewing the main arguments (government, enterprises, and self-advocacy).
- Topic sentences revised to explicitly tie supporting arguments to the thesis and clarify the logic.
- Body paragraph (on companies) revised for smoother explanation and stronger logical progression.
- Supporting sentences in the second body paragraph were reorganized for clarity, conciseness, and more effective use of example.
- Conclusion revised to restate the nuanced position and summarize both sub-arguments.

- Missed Opportunities:

- Vocabulary could be made even more sophisticated and less repetitive (e.g., "proactively," "assertion," etc.).
- Some transitions between points could be more fluent for seamless reading.
- Occasional awkward phrasing remains.

HUMAN-AI INTERACTION ASSESSMENT

- Chat History Analysis:

- Total Exchanges: 38

- Conversation Quality:

The interaction is stepwise, systematic, and highly collaborative. The student initiates improvement with clear aims (grammar and logic), and the AI scaffolds the workflow with targeted feedback and revision prompts. The student actively participates in each step, offering multiple drafts, reflecting, querying alternatives, and requesting further guidance on specific points such as the conclusion.

- Interaction Scores:

- In-Depth Conversation: 5/5

The conversation involved more than 35 back-and-forth exchanges. The student participates in all three revision steps, engages in clarifying questions ("Or shall I simply remove...?"), asks for additional evaluations ("what about my conclusion...?"), and revises paragraphs multiple times. There is evidence of iterative, multi-level questioning and follow-up.

- Critical Review of AI Suggestions: 4/5

The student occasionally questions the AI's modeling (e.g., asking about removing a phrase, or instructing the AI to check a newly revised sentence), and chooses between AI suggestions and their own ideas. There are some direct acceptances of advice without detailed rationalization, but overall, evaluation is visible.

- Refining Process: 5/5

The student not only performs the required three-step process (thesis, topic sentence, body paragraph), but also initiates further revision (improves a second body paragraph, requests a conclusion review). The process demonstrates iterative improvement in response to feedback at each stage.

- Human-AI Interaction Total: 14/15

OVERALL PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Strengths Demonstrated:

- Active Engagement and Iterative Revision: The student worked responsively through all major revision steps, including multiple passes at revision for thesis, body paragraphs, and conclusion.

- Logical and Organizational Clarity: Each revision cycle resulted in clearer, more logically connected sentences and arguments, showing understanding of how structure supports reasoning.

- Willingness to Critically Reflect and Improve: The student queried feedback ("Or shall I simply remove...?"), requested additional review of both arguments and the conclusion, and sometimes declined or adapted suggestions in their own words.

Areas for Improvement:

- Vocabulary Depth and Academic Tone: While precise, there is some repetition, and language could be diversified for stronger persuasive effect.

- Independent Critical Evaluation: Although some suggestions are questioned, deeper rationale for why a particular revision is effective/ineffective could be articulated.

- Transition and Fluency: More explicit logical connectors between points and within paragraphs would further enhance smooth progression.

AI Collaboration Skills Assessment:

- Context Provision: Excellent – The student clearly states priorities (grammar & logic), responds to prompts, and specifies which argument to work on.
- Strategic Planning: Excellent – Student follows structured steps, sets goals, and decides what to prioritize at each turn.
- Critical Evaluation: Good – Frequently asks clarifying questions and sometimes weighs options, but could elaborate more on reasoning behind choices.
- Independent Editing: Excellent – Student actively rewrites content, moves beyond simple surface edits, and demonstrates ownership of ideas and style.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

1. Essay Writing Skills:

Continue to diversify sentence structures and deploy more advanced, varied academic vocabulary. Work on transitions to create seamless logical flow throughout the essay.

2. AI Collaboration Skills:

When reviewing AI suggestions, consistently explain why you accept or reject certain advice—this will deepen critical thinking and self-awareness as a writer.

3. Overall Improvement:

After each paragraph revision, step back and reread the essay as a whole to ensure cohesion not just at the sentence or paragraph level, but essay-wide; consider peer review as an added perspective.

INSTRUCTOR NOTES

- The student has completed all required revision tasks: thesis, topic sentence, and body paragraph, and even exceeded minimum requirements by iteratively refining a second body paragraph and the conclusion.
- Engagement with the AI tutor was thorough and met the spirit and steps of the assignment.

- This student displays strong potential for independent revision and self-directed learning—future scaffolding can encourage even more independent critical reasoning around revision choices.

■■■■ Student Feedback ■ Rating: 4/5 ■ Comment: No additional comment provided.

Current Mode:assessment

Complete Conversation

Assistant:

Original:

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. However, my perspective differs slightly—while government action is crucial, it cannot be the sole solution.

Naturally, governments bear primary responsibility for this problem. It is evident that the laws formulated by governments shape a country's development trajectory. For instance, if governments prohibit companies from forcing migrant workers to work longer hours than native-born employees, migrant workers will enjoy better working conditions. We must acknowledge that governments should introduce stricter legislation to protect migrant workers' rights.

Nevertheless, we cannot solely hold governments accountable or burden them with all the responsibility. To effectively improve migrant workers' working conditions and well-being, we need to call on all sectors of society to take action.

First, companies should implement more worker-friendly policies. As we all know, companies directly determine their employees' working experiences. If governments enforce stricter laws to protect workers' rights but companies refuse to comply, even if workers temporarily gain some protections, company leaders may undermine their well-being in other ways (e.g., cutting benefits or creating a hostile work environment).

Second, migrant workers themselves must develop awareness of their rights and the ability to defend them. Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

Revised:

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. Although government actions play a crucial role in protecting migrant workers, achieving lasting improvement requires enterprises to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively safeguard their rights.

Naturally, governments bear primary responsibility for this problem. It is evident that the laws formulated by governments shape a country's development trajectory. For instance, if governments prohibit companies from forcing migrant workers to work longer hours than native-born employees, migrant workers will enjoy better working conditions. We must acknowledge that governments should introduce stricter legislation to protect migrant workers' rights.

Nevertheless, we cannot solely hold governments accountable or burden them with all the responsibility. To effectively improve migrant workers' working conditions and well-being, we need to call on all sectors of society to take action.

First, apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Second, in addition to the actions taken by the government and enterprises, migrant workers must also proactively understand and safeguard their own rights and interests so as to truly benefit from the existing protective measures. Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

In conclusion, although strict government regulations lay the foundation for protecting migrant workers' rights, real progress still requires enterprises to actively ensure fair conditions and workers themselves to understand and defend their rights. Therefore, I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient. Lasting improvement can only be achieved when all sectors of society take responsibility together.

Assistant:

Hi there! ■ I'm your English writing coach, here to help you strengthen your essay through clear, focused revision. Before we dive in, we'll take a moment to set some goals together.

Here's how our session will work:

Negotiate your targets — We'll start by discussing what you want to improve most in your essay.

Get a quick diagnosis — I'll give you feedback on your essay based on key writing rubrics (like thesis, organization, evidence, and language).

Choose what to focus on — You'll decide which issues you'd like to work on first.

Then we'll move through a structured, three-step revision process:

Step 1: Revise your thesis statement.

Step 2: Choose one body paragraph and refine its topic sentence.

Step 3: Revise the rest of that paragraph for clarity and coherence.

My role is to guide you with questions, feedback, and examples—but you'll always lead the revisions yourself. ■

You:

I hope we can better my article's grammar and logic.

Assistant:

Absolutely, I'm happy to help you with both your grammar and logical flow! Let's begin with the preliminary stage—negotiating learning targets and diagnosing your essay.

1. Negotiating Targets

You said you want to improve “grammar and logic” in your article. Both are very important! For our session, do you want to focus more on:

Grammar and sentence structure (accuracy and variety)?

Logic and organization (clear ideas, strong argument, logical flow)?

Or an even balance between both?

Please let me know which is most important to you right now. If there's anything else you want to focus on (for example, vocabulary, critical analysis, or clarity), mention that too!

2. Diagnostic Feedback

Because your current draft is empty, I don't have an essay to diagnose yet. Could you please share your essay draft—even if it is just a short paragraph or outline? Once you share your writing, I'll use the rubric to highlight strengths and areas we can improve, focusing especially on grammar and logical organization as you requested.

3. Student Priority Selection

After I provide feedback, I'll ask you which areas (from my diagnosis) you want to prioritize. Then I'll confirm our targets before moving forward.

Next Step for You:

Please tell me:

- Which target do you want to focus on most (grammar, logic, or both)?
- Can you share your draft, even if it's just a starting paragraph or some bullet points?

Once you send your draft, we'll continue with the workflow and revision steps!

You:

1. Both

Assistant:

Great, thank you for letting me know you want to focus on both grammar and logic/organization. That will help us strengthen your essay overall!

2. Diagnostic Feedback

Let's review your revised essay according to the rubric areas—Content & Ideas, Organization & Logical Progression, Vocabulary, and Grammar & Sentence Structure—paying extra attention to grammar accuracy/variety and logical flow.

Diagnostic Overview

Strengths:

Clear ideas and argument: Your main claim—that protecting migrant workers' rights requires more than government action—is clear. You give supporting reasons (the role of government, companies, and self-advocacy).

Organization: The essay follows a logical structure. You start with the problem and thesis, break down your two main points in body paragraphs, and finish with a summary statement.

Vocabulary: Good use of academic and topic-specific terms ("enforce stricter laws," "self-advocacy," "legislation," "prohibit," "safeguard," etc.).

Grammar: Most sentences are correct and clear, with some minor usage errors.

Areas for Improvement:

A. Grammar & Sentence Structure

- Some sentences are wordy or slightly awkward; tightening them can improve flow.
- A few sentences could be more varied in structure (e.g., avoid repeated patterns).
- Occasional article use ("the"/"a") or tense issues.

B. Logic & Organization

- The thesis could be clearer about previewing your main points (companies and workers themselves).
- Topic sentences sometimes lack explicit connection to the thesis or overall argument.
- The conclusion is strong but could echo the main supporting points more directly.

C. Other

- You sometimes generalize (e.g., "As we all know..."), which is less academic in tone.
- Some transitions could be sharper to highlight logical relationships between ideas.

3. Student Priority Selection

Based on this feedback, here are a few key areas we could focus on:

1. Thesis statement clarity and preview of main points
2. Topic sentence organization and clear connection to thesis
3. Grammar: Sentence variety, precision, and minor errors
4. Transitions and logical flow

Which two out of these would you MOST like to prioritize in our revision for today?

(For example, "Thesis statement" and "Grammar," or "Topic sentence" and "Logical flow.")

Please let me know your choices—once you confirm, we'll begin Step 1: Thesis Statement Revision!

You:

Logical flow

Assistant:

Thank you for confirming! We'll focus mainly on logical flow (organization: clear argument, logical connections, structure) as our top priority for today, while referring to grammar if it's relevant during revision.

Here's a recap of our targets for this session:

Main focus: Logical flow (clear thesis, connected topic sentences, logical organization in paragraph)

Secondary: Grammar if it relates to clarity and logical progression (not general editing)

Step 1 – Thesis Statement Revision

First, please share your current thesis statement.

If you're not sure exactly which sentence is your thesis, I'll help you find it in your introduction.

Looking at your introduction, it seems the thesis is here:

"However, my perspective differs slightly—while government action is crucial, it cannot be the sole solution."

Let's review this for logical flow. A strong thesis should:

- Directly answer the essay question
- Preview the MAIN supporting points (what else is needed besides government action)
- Use confident, academic tone

Suggestions:

- Your current thesis is a bit general. It says government action isn't enough, but doesn't clearly preview your main points (companies and self-advocacy).
- It could be more direct in answering the essay question, e.g. "I disagree that only governments matter; individuals and companies must also play key roles."

Would you like to try revising your thesis to more clearly preview your main points?

Here's a model for structure (but please try your own words first):

"While government action is essential to protecting migrant workers, meaningful change also depends on the involvement of companies and the self-advocacy of the workers themselves."

Prompt:

Would you like to try writing your revised thesis now, making sure it directly previews your two main supporting points (company action and self-advocacy)? If you need a hint, let me know!

Once you're satisfied with your thesis statement, please share your revision—then we'll move to Step 2: topic sentence revision.

You:

How about now?

Assistant:

Great! Let's move through our structured revision workflow together, focusing on logical flow as you requested.

Step 1 – Thesis Statement Revision

Your current thesis in the revised draft is:

"However, my perspective differs slightly—Although the government's actions are crucial for protecting migrant workers, for meaningful change to occur, the participation of enterprises and the active pursuit of rights by the migrant workers themselves are also necessary."

Feedback:

- The meaning is clear, but the sentence is a bit complicated and could be more concise.
- "My perspective differs slightly—Although..." causes confusion with the dash and "although."
- Let's make the connection between all three groups (government, companies, workers) clearer, and preview these roles confidently.

Here's a suggested structure for your thesis:

While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Would you like to try writing your own revised thesis using this model?

(It should mention all three groups and use strong, precise language.)

Prompt:

Try writing a sentence that (1) says government alone isn't enough, and (2) briefly mentions the roles of companies and migrant workers themselves. Let me know when you're ready or if you want any hints!

When you're happy with your revised thesis statement, please share it. I'll give feedback, and then we'll continue to Step 2: Topic Sentence Revision.

You:

Like this?

Assistant:

Absolutely! That's a strong start—let's review your revised thesis statement and move through the next steps together as we focus on logical flow.

Step 1 – Thesis Statement Revision

Your Revised Thesis:

While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Feedback:

- This version is clear and directly addresses the essay question.
- It confidently mentions all three groups (government, companies, and workers).
- The sentence structure is strong and academic.

Tiny edits for fluency (optional):

You can slightly refine it for smoother parallelism:

While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and migrant workers to actively assert their rights.

But your version is already very good! If you're satisfied, you can keep it as is.

Are you happy with this thesis statement, or would you like to make any tweaks?

Just let me know if you want a hint or example!

Once you confirm your thesis, we'll move to:

Step 2 – Topic Sentence Revision

Please select one body paragraph to work on (for example, the paragraph about companies' responsibility, or the one about workers' self-advocacy).

Paste the topic sentence of that paragraph here (the first sentence of that body paragraph).

Next Prompt:

Which paragraph do you want to revise first—the one about companies, or the one about migrant workers themselves?

Paste its topic sentence below, and we'll check how well it links to your new thesis and improve the logical flow!

Let's keep going—I'm here to guide and encourage you.

You:

First, companies should implement more worker-friendly policies.

Assistant:

Great choice! Let's focus on the body paragraph about companies' responsibility.

Step 2 – Topic Sentence Revision

Your Current Topic Sentence:

First, companies should implement more worker-friendly policies.

Feedback:

Strengths: The sentence clearly states the paragraph's main idea.

How it connects (or doesn't): At the moment, the connection to your thesis could be stronger—you want to highlight why the company role matters, in relation to your main argument that "lasting improvement" requires company action (not just government action).

Using "First," is okay for sequence, but you could add a phrase to remind the reader of the issue (i.e., the need for more than just government solutions).

Also, "worker-friendly" is good, but you could be more specific (e.g., "fair practices that safeguard the rights of all employees").

Guiding Questions:

Can you link the need for company action directly to the thesis? (e.g., "Beyond government regulation, companies must...")

Can you remind the reader of the specific reason companies are vital for protecting migrant workers?

Would you like to try revising your topic sentence now?

Here are two stem ideas to help if you want a push:

- "In addition to government efforts, companies must _____ in order to..."
- "Since companies have a direct influence on workers' conditions, they need to..."

(Remember, try to use your own words first!)

When you're happy with your revised topic sentence, please paste it here. I'll give you feedback and then we'll work on the rest of the paragraph (Step 3).

You:

First, Since enterprises have a direct influence on the working conditions of their employees, beyond government regulation, companies need to take action to improve these conditions.

Assistant:

Fantastic work! You've given your topic sentence more context and made its logical role clearer. Let's break it down:

Step 2 – Topic Sentence Review

Your Revised Topic Sentence:

Since enterprises have a direct influence on the working conditions of their employees, beyond government regulation, companies need to take action to improve these conditions.

Strengths:

- Explains why companies matter (they directly influence workers' conditions).
- Makes a logical link to your thesis by highlighting company responsibility beyond just following regulations.
- Clear, academic style.

Suggestions for Small Improvements:

- The introductory clause could be streamlined for clarity and flow. For example, "Since enterprises have a direct influence..." is great, but the phrase "beyond government regulation" could flow more naturally after you set up the main clause.
- For smoother logic and readability, consider this structure:

In addition to following government regulations, companies need to take proactive steps to improve working conditions, since they directly influence the daily experiences of their employees.

Would you like to try a slight revision for smoother flow, or do you feel confident with your version?

Either way is fine—your sentence already does a good job! Let me know if you want to try revising it, or if you'd like to keep it as is and move to Step 3.

Step 3 – Revising the Supporting Sentences (Rest of the Paragraph)

Let's continue! Please paste the rest of the body paragraph about company responsibility here (everything after your topic sentence).

We'll look at:

- Whether all supporting details clearly relate to the revised topic sentence,
- If there's logical coherence and smooth transitions,
- Any grammar or clarity improvements that can help the logical flow.

When you're ready, paste the rest of the paragraph and we'll work through it together—one step at a time!

You:

Or shall I simply remove the sentence "except for the government" from the main sentence?

Assistant:

Great question! Let's look at your topic sentence and see how removing "except for the government" (or similar phrasing) might help the logical flow.

Your Revised Topic Sentence was:

Since enterprises have a direct influence on the working conditions of their employees, beyond government regulation, companies need to take action to improve these conditions.

Guidance

The phrase "beyond government regulation" is a bit awkward where it is. It can make the sentence heavy, and readers might pause to process how it fits.

If you remove this phrase, your sentence will be more direct and easier to read. The link to the thesis (that company responsibility matters, not just government action) is still clear if you simply say companies must act to improve working conditions.

Alternatively, you could clarify it by placing the idea at the start or end, e.g., "In addition to government regulation, companies need..." or "Companies need to take action on their own, not just rely on government regulation..."

Options

Remove the "except for/beyond government regulation" part:

Since enterprises have a direct influence on the working conditions of their employees, companies need to take action to improve these conditions.

Make the relationship clearer by changing the order:

In addition to government regulation, companies need to take action to improve working conditions, since they directly influence their employees' daily experiences.

Keep it nearly as is, but clarify:

While government regulation is important, companies must also take action to improve the working conditions of their employees.

My Recommendation

Removing “beyond government regulation” does make your sentence cleaner and more logical. You can also try variations above to see which one feels best to you.

Would you like to:

Remove the phrase for a cleaner sentence?

Or try one of the variations that clarifies the link to government regulation, while keeping the focus on companies?

You can write your preferred topic sentence now.

Let me know which option you choose, or if you want to try your own revision!

You:

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take actions to improve the working environment, as these environments directly affect the daily experiences of employees.

Assistant:

Excellent revision! Your topic sentence is now clearer, more logically structured, and directly connects to your main argument. Let's break it down:

Your Revised Topic Sentence:

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take actions to improve the working environment, as these environments directly affect the daily experiences of employees.

Strengths:

- Clearly indicates that company action is required in addition to government regulation—this links directly to your thesis.
- Explains WHY company actions are important (because they directly affect employees' daily lives).
- Precise academic tone.

Tiny refinements for grammar/flow (optional):

- “Take actions” → “take action” (usually uncountable in academic writing).
- “These environments” could sound slightly less direct than “the working environment” or “working conditions.” (But both are correct!)

So, a slightly refined version for conciseness:

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences.

But your version is already strong! Use whichever you're more comfortable with.

Are you happy with this topic sentence, or do you want to make a small tweak?

When you're ready, we'll move on to revising the rest of this paragraph.

Step 3 – Revising the Rest of the Paragraph

Please paste the rest of your body paragraph about company responsibility here (everything following the topic sentence).

Guiding Questions:

- Does every sentence relate clearly to your new topic sentence?
- Are your examples and explanations clear and logically connected?
- Are there sentences that could be made more concise or that need better grammar/flow?

When you share the rest of this paragraph, I'll help you review and revise it for logical coherence and clarity, always encouraging you to try changes yourself first!

Next step:

Paste your supporting sentences for the “companies’ responsibility” paragraph, and let’s keep strengthening your essay—one step at a time!

You:

First, apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. If governments enforce stricter laws to protect workers' rights but companies refuse to comply, even if workers temporarily gain some protections, company leaders may undermine their well-being in other ways (e.g., cutting benefits or creating a hostile work environment).

Assistant:

Fantastic! You've provided your updated topic sentence and the supporting sentences for the body paragraph about companies' responsibility. Let's work together, step by step, to revise this paragraph for logical flow, coherence, and clarity—while keeping grammar in mind where it helps your argument shine.

Step 3 – Revising the Rest of the Body Paragraph

Your current paragraph:

First, apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. If governments enforce stricter laws to protect workers' rights but companies refuse to comply, even if workers temporarily gain some protections, company leaders may undermine their well-being in other ways (e.g., cutting benefits or creating a hostile work environment).

Step-by-Step Revision Process

1. Check connections to the topic sentence:

- Does each sentence support the idea that company actions are essential in addition to government regulation?
Yes: The example shows that even if the government acts, companies can still undermine workers.

2. Identify areas to clarify, reorganize, or condense:

- The second sentence is a bit long—let's break it up for clarity.
The ideas about “not complying” and “finding other ways to exploit workers” could be stated more distinctly.
Add a transition or explanation to strengthen logic.

Let's Revise!

Here's a step-by-step guide (with prompts for you):

A. Breaking down the long supporting sentence:

Original:

If governments enforce stricter laws to protect workers' rights but companies refuse to comply, even if workers temporarily gain some protections, company leaders may undermine their well-being in other ways (e.g., cutting benefits or creating a hostile work environment).

Revision ideas:

- Start with what happens if companies ignore laws.
- Explain with a brief example.
- Make clear that lasting improvement depends on company cooperation.

Prompt:

Would you like to try rewriting this supporting idea as two shorter sentences?

Consider something like:

Even if governments introduce stricter laws to protect workers, these laws may be ineffective if companies refuse to comply. In addition, some companies may find alternative ways to reduce costs, such as cutting benefits or creating an unfriendly working environment, which can still harm employees.

Practice:

Try to rewrite these two ideas, focusing on:

- What happens if companies don't obey the rules?
- How might companies “undermine well-being” in other ways (with one clear example)?

Would you like to try now?

(If you get stuck, I'll give you a model and you can adapt it.)

Optional Model if You Need Inspiration

Only read if you feel unsure—otherwise, try your own first!

Even when governments introduce stricter labor laws, these measures may fail if companies ignore or find ways around them. For instance, some companies might reduce employee benefits or create a stressful workplace atmosphere, which still harms migrant workers despite the legal protections.

When you're ready, paste your revised supporting sentences here.

We need each idea to connect clearly and logically to your topic sentence ("companies must take action...") and to make the potential dangers of non-compliance or bypassing clear.

Once you rework these two supporting sentences, we'll quickly check the whole paragraph for clarity and flow. Then I'll provide the latest full revision of your essay with your new thesis and improved paragraph!

You:

Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Assistant:

Excellent job! Your revised supporting sentences are much clearer and create a strong, logical link between your topic sentence and the overall argument about the limitations of relying solely on government regulation. Here's some detailed feedback and encouragement for your paragraph:

Step 3 – Paragraph Review

Your Updated Supporting Sentences:

Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Strengths:

Logical Flow: You clearly explain why company action matters—government rules aren't enough if companies do not cooperate.

Structure: The idea moves step by step: (1) government action, (2) company non-compliance, (3) concrete examples, (4) result for workers.

Clarity: Each sentence builds on the last, making the logic easy to follow.

Minor suggestions for polish (optional):

"Every means to evade their constraints" can be slightly simplified to "find ways to evade them" for even smoother flow.

The final sentence ("This still causes harm to migrant workers.") is strong, but could be connected back to why company action is necessary, e.g., "Therefore, company cooperation is essential for truly improving working conditions."

Example of a lightly revised version, based on your sentences:

Even if the government introduces stricter labor regulations, these measures may not be effective if enterprises ignore the rules or find ways to evade them. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers and shows why companies' active efforts are essential.

BUT: Your version is already very good! You don't need to use this—yours is clear and logically sound.

Would you like to:

Keep your newly revised version as is?

Or try a small tweak for clarity/connection as above?

When you confirm, I will post your updated essay with the latest thesis, topic sentence, and revised body paragraph included. Let me know your preference!

Your Revised Body Paragraph (current version):

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Ready for your fully updated essay?

If you'd like, I can now provide your full revised draft so you can see how everything fits together. Just let me know if you have any last tweaks before we finish!

Excellent effort throughout this process—your logical flow and clarity have really improved!

Your Full, Latest Revised Essay

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Second, migrant workers themselves must develop awareness of their rights and the ability to defend them. Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

Congratulations—you followed the full revision workflow, and your essay now demonstrates significantly improved logical flow and organization.

Would you like to review anything else, or do you have any last questions?

If not, well done! I hope you feel proud of your progress.

You:

I think

Assistant:

Thank you for your impressive engagement and effort! Let's review your final revised draft and offer a few last bits of encouragement, along with suggestions if you'd like to push it a bit further.

Your Final Revised Essay

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Second, migrant workers themselves must develop awareness of their rights and the ability to defend them. Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

Encouragement and Optional Last Edits

What you did well:

- Your essay now shows a clear thesis statement with a preview of your two main points.
- Topic sentences connect directly to your thesis, supporting strong logical flow.
- Supporting sentences are coherent, varied, and clearly related to your main ideas.
- You gave specific, realistic examples, and your conclusion reinforces the position.

Further improvements (optional):

- You could make your conclusion even stronger by explicitly restating the two key roles from the body paragraphs, e.g.:
> In conclusion, although government regulation is necessary, genuine improvement in migrant workers' rights depends equally on the commitment of companies and the self-advocacy of workers themselves.

A few transitions might add even more smoothness (e.g., "Furthermore," before your second body paragraph topic sentence).

Reflecting on the Revision Process

You:

- Identified and improved your thesis statement so it was both clear and predictive,
- Revised a body paragraph topic sentence to flow logically from your thesis,
- Broke down supporting ideas into logical steps with concrete details,
- Focused on argument structure and organization, as you set out to do.

This shows excellent academic writing skills and strong revision habits!

Final Thought

Would you like to add anything, or do you want feedback on another paragraph (or skill) in the future? If not, well done—the structure, logic, and clarity of your writing have improved a lot!

Keep practicing—your academic writing will continue to get even stronger over time. If you need more help with essays or revision, you know how to reach me!

You:

I hope I can revise the expression of my second sub-argument again.

Assistant:

Absolutely, I'd be happy to guide you through revising the expression of your second sub-argument (the paragraph about migrant workers' self-advocacy). Let's continue using our interactive workflow to strengthen its clarity, logical flow, and coherence.

Step 2 (Topic Sentence of Second Sub-Argument)—Review and Revision

Current Topic Sentence:

"Second, migrant workers themselves must develop awareness of their rights and the ability to defend them."

Analysis/Tips:

Strengths: Clear, direct, and introduces the idea of self-advocacy.

Possible Improvements:

Signal its connection to the thesis ("lasting improvement requires not only laws and company action, but also...")

Make the necessity and logical reason clearer ("Without self-advocacy, external support is not enough...")

Prompt:

Would you like to try revising your topic sentence to highlight the importance of self-advocacy and its direct relation to protecting rights? For example:

In addition to government and company action, migrant workers must actively understand and defend their own rights in order to truly benefit from existing protections.

Or try your own version—just keep the link to the thesis, and make sure it's strong!

Step 3—Supporting Sentences Review

Your current supporting sentences:

Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Strengths:

- Explains why self-advocacy matters,
- Gives a specific example,

- Logical chain: lack of awareness → lack of protection,
- Conclusion reinforces the need for self-advocacy.

Possible Improvements:

- Add transition ("Furthermore,...").
 - Make the logical sequence even smoother, e.g., explain why lack of awareness leads to missed protection.
 - Use more varied sentence structure.
 - End with a clear closing line connecting back to the thesis (e.g., "Self-advocacy is therefore essential for lasting improvement.")
-

Guided Revision Process

Prompt for You:

Try to revise this paragraph so that:

- The topic sentence clearly connects to your thesis and sets up the importance of self-advocacy.
- Supporting details logically explain why workers' own actions matter—even with laws in place.
- Example is concise and clearly shows the main point.
- Closing sentence reinforces the essential role of self-advocacy.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence and/or make small changes to the supporting sentences for smoother flow?

If you want, you can start with these stems:

- "Furthermore, real progress requires migrant workers to understand and assert their rights, since..."
 - "For instance, even with strict government laws, workers who lack awareness..."
-

Once you share your revised paragraph (or just the topic sentence, if you want to start there), I'll give feedback, encouragement, and help you polish it if needed.

Would you like to write your revision now?

Let me know when you're ready!

If you provide an updated version, I'll review it for:

- Clarity and logic in topic sentence,
 - Coherence and unified development of supporting ideas,
 - Smooth transitions and academic tone.
-

Ready when you are!

Paste your revised second sub-argument (just the topic sentence, or the whole paragraph if you want), and let's make it shine together!

You:

Second, in addition to the actions taken by the government and enterprises, migrant workers must also proactively understand and safeguard their own rights and interests so as to truly benefit from the existing protective measures.. Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Assistant:

Fantastic work! Let's review your revised second sub-argument paragraph for clarity, logical flow, and coherence—then strengthen it based on your revision goals.

Your Current Draft

Second, in addition to the actions taken by the government and enterprises, migrant workers must also proactively understand and safeguard their own rights and interests so as to truly benefit from the existing protective measures. Without self-advocacy, no external support can truly help. For example, an employee at an electronics company I know lives in a city where the government has enacted strict laws to protect workers like him: his company is prohibited from making him work more than 8 hours a day and must pay him the same salary as native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these laws and paid little attention to his rights. In such cases, even with legal protections in place, he could not fully safeguard his interests. Thus, migrant workers must proactively learn about and value their rights.

Step-by-Step Feedback and Suggestions

1. Topic Sentence

Strength: Clearly relates this point to the thesis and adds context.

Small improvements: You could make it even more streamlined and academic by reducing redundancy (e.g., don't say "proactively" and "so as to..."). Consider directly stating the logical reason why their own actions matter.

Smoother version (optional):

Second, in addition to government and company efforts, migrant workers must actively understand and defend their rights in order to truly benefit from existing protections.

2. Supporting Sentences

Logical Coherence: The main idea and example are clear.

Clarity: "So as to truly benefit from the existing protective measures" is a bit wordy; simplify for academic tone.

Sentence Structure: The example is long; split into two sentences for emphasis.

Repetition: You use "proactively" and "must proactively learn"—try to use just one form for variety.

3. Flow and Transitions

Consider adding a transition at the start: "Furthermore," or "Moreover," to connect with the previous paragraph smoothly.

Guiding Prompts for Your Revision

Would you like to:

- Simplify the topic sentence for academic tone and parallel structure?
- Split the example into shorter, clearer sentences?
- Vary your vocabulary/avoid repeating "proactively"?

You can try this structure:

1. Transition + clear topic sentence linking back to thesis.
2. Explanation of why self-advocacy is crucial.
3. Realistic example in two sentences for clarity.
4. Conclude: restate the need for self-advocacy.

Your Turn!

Try writing your revision below (use your own words, but here's a structure for help):

Furthermore, to truly benefit from protective measures, migrant workers must actively understand and defend their rights. Without self-advocacy, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For example, I know an employee at an electronics company in a city with strict labor laws: his company cannot require him to work over eight hours a day and must pay him equal wages to native-born colleagues. However, he was unaware of these rights, so he could not protect his interests even with legal protections in place. Therefore, self-advocacy is essential for ensuring migrant workers' rights are respected.

Would you like to try your own version now? Just adjust your sentences one at a time.

If you're happy with your current draft, let me know and I'll post your full, updated essay!

Ready to revise? Paste your updated paragraph below, or say if you want to keep your current version. I'm here to help!

You:

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

Assistant:

Excellent revision! Your updated second sub-argument paragraph is much clearer, more concise, and the logical flow is strong. Let's look at the strengths in detail, and (if you'd like) I'll suggest a tiny tweak to the topic sentence for parallelism, but your draft is already effective and academic.

Your Revised Paragraph

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

Strengths

Clear logical progression: You move from the principle (self-assertion needed), provide a concrete example with context and outcome, then conclude the main point.

Smooth transitions: "For instance," "However," "Therefore," organize your examples and explanations well.

Academic tone: Your language is formal and precise, suitable for academic writing.

Conciseness: The sentences are clear, direct, and not repetitive.

Tiny Suggestions (Optional)

If you want even stronger connection to the previous argument, you might start with a sentence like:

Furthermore, self-assertion by migrant workers is crucial for ensuring their rights are respected.

Or, you could attach your first two sentences for an even more impactful topic sentence:

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results for migrant workers.

But: Your current structure works well! Choose whichever version you prefer.

Your Fully Revised Essay

Here is your current full draft with all the improvements incorporated:

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

Final Encouragement

You have:

- A clear thesis previewing both main points,
- Strong and logical topic sentences,
- Body paragraphs that develop the argument with clear evidence and reasoning,
- A realistic, relevant example,
- Consistent, formal academic tone and improved grammar,
- A persuasive, well-organized conclusion.

Your critical analysis, logical connection, and expression are now much stronger. Fantastic effort and progress!

Would you like any final tweaks, or are you ready to submit this version?

If you want a final suggestion (or optional advanced refinement), just ask. Otherwise—congratulations, your essay is looking excellent!

You:

What

Assistant:

Thank you for your clear, step-by-step engagement in the revision process! Here's a summary of how you've strengthened your essay, plus your final, complete revised version—ready for submission unless you'd like any last changes.

Summary of Your Improvements

The Thesis is clear, confident, and previews both main sub-arguments.

Body paragraphs:

Topic sentences directly link to the thesis and clearly state the role of companies and the necessity of self-advocacy.

Supporting sentences explain why each action is needed, with specific, logical examples.

Evidence is relevant and well-integrated.

Organization is logical, paragraphs are unified, and transitions are smooth.

Grammar and academic tone have improved for clarity and formality.

Conclusion reinforces your multi-layered solution and echoes your main points.

Your Final, Fully Revised Essay

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

What You Should Feel Proud Of

Your essay now shows excellent comprehension of the prompt and rubric requirements.

You've applied advanced critical thinking and revision skills.

Your logical flow, structure, and academic expression are much stronger.

If you have any last questions or would like help with a final polish (such as a smoother transition or a slightly more academic conclusion), let me know! Otherwise, this version is polished, cohesive, and ready to submit. Great work! ■

You:

what about my conclusion(final paragraph)

Assistant:

Let's review your conclusion and see how well it works—and how you could make it even more effective!

Your Current Conclusion

Safeguarding migrant workers' rights does not depend solely on strict government laws; it requires the participation of every segment of society. Only when migrant workers advocate for themselves, companies fulfill their responsibilities, and governments uphold their duties can these workers truly secure their legitimate rights.

Strengths of Your Conclusion

Clear position: You restate your main argument that all actors must participate—not just government.

Synthesis: You summarize your essay by briefly mentioning workers, companies, and government.

Academic tone: The language is formal and appropriate for academic writing.

Finality: The paragraph ends with a strong “only when...can...” sentence, which creates a sense of closure and emphasis.

How Could It Be Even Stronger?

Echo your main points: You can specify the kinds of actions required from each group, not just name them. This reminds the reader exactly what you argued.

Explicit answer to the prompt: Consider clearly stating your overall opinion or degree of agreement/disagreement, as the essay question asks (“To what extent do you agree or disagree...”).

Powerful clincher: A memorable, academic final line can make your argument more persuasive.

Revision Options and Prompts

Would you like to try revising your conclusion to:

- Explicitly mention the types of actions or roles for government, companies, and workers?
- Clearly state your level of agreement/disagreement in the last line?

Here is a model structure to guide you (don't copy—just get inspired!):

In conclusion, although strict government regulation forms the foundation for protecting migrant workers' rights, genuine progress also relies on companies actively ensuring fair conditions and on workers understanding and asserting their own rights. I therefore strongly disagree with the idea that government efforts alone are sufficient; lasting improvement depends on the shared responsibility of all sectors of society.

Or you could try your own version!

Prompt for You:

Would you like to try revising your concluding paragraph now, making sure to:

- Summarize the specific roles of each group,
- State clearly to what extent you agree or disagree,
- Leave the reader with a sense of unity or call to action, if possible?

When you paste your revision here, I'll review and help you polish it as needed!

If you want to keep your conclusion as is, that's okay—it already meets the rubric well. But if you want to push toward an “excellent” level, a small revision could make it even more impactful.

What would you like to do?

You:

In conclusion, although strict government regulations have laid the foundation for protecting the rights of migrant workers, real progress still requires enterprises to actively ensure fair conditions, based on the understanding and protection of workers' own rights. Therefore, I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient. To achieve lasting improvement, all sectors of society need to take responsibility together.

Assistant:

That's an excellent revision! You have created a conclusion that:

Clearly summarizes the specific roles: You refer to strict government regulation as a foundation, highlight the responsibility of enterprises to ensure fair conditions, and stress the importance of workers understanding and protecting their own rights.

Directly addresses your stance on the essay question: "I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient."

Gives a sense of unity and a final call to action: "All sectors of society need to take responsibility together."

Your language is confident, academic, and to the point. Just a very minor language tweak to ensure conciseness and parallel structure. Here's a slightly polished version (mainly for fluency; you may use it or keep your original):

Final Polished Conclusion

In conclusion, although strict government regulations lay the foundation for protecting migrant workers' rights, real progress still requires enterprises to actively ensure fair conditions and workers themselves to understand and defend their rights. Therefore, I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient. Lasting improvement can only be achieved when all sectors of society take responsibility together.

Your Final, Fully Revised Essay

Recently, migrant workers are facing exploitation driven by weak regulations, enduring long hours and lower pay compared to the native-born population. To address this issue, some argue that governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard these workers' rights. While government action plays a vital role in protecting migrant workers, lasting improvement also requires companies to adopt fair practices and for migrant workers themselves to actively assert their rights.

Apart from government regulation, enterprises also need to take action to improve the working environment, as it directly affects employees' daily experiences. Even if the government has introduced stricter labor regulations, if enterprises ignore these rules or try every means to evade their constraints, then these measures may not be effective. For instance, some enterprises might reduce employee benefits or create a highly stressful working environment, despite certain legal protections. This still causes harm to migrant workers.

Without self-assertion, external assistance cannot achieve lasting results. For instance, I know an employee of an electronics company working in a city with strict labor laws. According to the law, his company cannot require him to work more than eight hours a day, and must pay him the same salary as local employees. However, he was unaware of these rights, so even with legal protection, he was unable to safeguard his own interests. Therefore, self-assertion is crucial for ensuring that the rights of migrant workers are respected.

In conclusion, although strict government regulations lay the foundation for protecting migrant workers' rights, real progress still requires enterprises to actively ensure fair conditions and workers themselves to understand and defend their rights. Therefore, I firmly disagree with the view that only government efforts are sufficient. Lasting improvement can only be achieved when all sectors of society take responsibility together.

Well done! Your conclusion now confidently echoes your main arguments and directly answers the essay prompt. Your essay shows excellent academic reasoning and is clearly organized. If you have any final questions or would like another round of feedback on any part, just let me know! Otherwise, you are ready to submit a strong, well-argued essay.