

HKBU LANG 0036 Learning Session Report

Generated: 2025-11-23 15:10:15

Student Email: 25238868@life.hkbu.edu.hk

Student Number: 25238868

Section: 48

Course Information and Student Background

Course Information: Course: LANG 0036 - English for Academic Purposes Level: Intermediate to Advanced Focus: Academic writing and critical thinking Assessment: Essay writing with rubric-based evaluation

Student Background: Academic Level: University student Language: English as additional language Goals: Improve academic writing skills Challenges: Structure, vocabulary, critical analysis

Assessment Task: Writing (20%) Part 1: Point-of-view Essay (10%)

Criteria: Content and Ideas 1 (Limited): Ideas are irrelevant or minimally related to the topic. Lacks awareness of the issue concerned. No clear viewpoint. 2 (Basic): Ideas are somewhat related but vague. Minimal awareness of the issue concerned. Viewpoint unclear. 3 (Developing): Ideas are relevant but basic. Some awareness of the issue concerned. Viewpoint present but weakly developed. 4 (Proficient): Ideas are relevant and solid. Good awareness of the issue concerned. Clear viewpoint with some depth. 5 (Excellent): Ideas are insightful and highly relevant. Strong awareness of the issue concerned. Well-developed, compelling viewpoint.

Criteria: Organisation and Logical Progression 1 (Limited): No clear structure. Ideas are disjointed with no development or progression. 2 (Basic): Basic structure with unclear paragraphing. Ideas are listed with little development. 3 (Developing): Clear structure with some paragraphing. Ideas are developed but lack depth or logical flow. 4 (Proficient): Well-organized with clear paragraphs. Ideas are developed logically with good flow and support. 5 (Excellent): Highly organized with effective paragraphing. Ideas are thoroughly developed with seamless, logical progression.

Criteria: Vocabulary 1 (Limited): Vocabulary is limited, repetitive, or inaccurate. Lacks topic-specific terms. 2 (Basic): Basic vocabulary with some repetition. Minimal use of topic-specific terms. 3 (Developing): Adequate vocabulary with some variety. Includes some topic-specific terms but with occasional errors. 4 (Proficient): Varied and precise vocabulary. Effective use of topic-specific terms. Minor errors. 5 (Excellent): Rich, precise vocabulary. Masterful use of topic-specific terms. Almost error-free and sophisticated.

Criteria: Grammar and Sentence Structure 1 (Limited): Frequent grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are incomplete or confusing. 2 (Basic): Several grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are simple and often flawed. 3 (Developing): Some grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are mostly correct but lack variety. 4 (Proficient): Minor grammatical and spelling errors. Sentences are varied and mostly accurate. 5 (Excellent): Virtually error-free grammar and spelling. Sentences are complex, varied, and accurately constructed.

Part 2: AI-Assisted Review Skills (10%) A. In-Depth Conversation with AI 1 (Limited): No exchanges or chat history; no questions asked. 2 (Basic): Sparse conversation; one or two simple questions. 3 (Developing): Adequate exchanges; some relevant questions. 4 (Proficient): Robust interaction; detailed, relevant questions across levels. 5 (Excellent): Extensive, well-documented chat history; insightful, multi-level questioning.

B. Critical Review of AI Suggestions 1 (Limited): All AI suggestions accepted blindly. 2 (Basic): Most accepted; little analysis. 3 (Developing): Some evaluated; partial justification. 4 (Proficient): Most critically reviewed with clear justification. 5 (Excellent): All evaluated thoroughly with strong, evidence-based reasoning.

C. Refining Process 1 (Limited): No revisions made. 2 (Basic): Minimal revisions; no iteration. 3 (Developing): Some revisions with limited iteration. 4 (Proficient): Clear iterative process with multiple revisions. 5 (Excellent): Extensive refinement with iterative improvements. Student Background: Academic Level: level 3 Language: Chinese Goals: improve English Challenges: not good at structure, contents and vocab

Contribution Analysis

Great job on those two sentences! When you're ready, please continue with the rest of the exercises. Here's a reminder of the remaining sentences for Exercise 1, plus the other exercises:

Exercise 1 — Articles (remaining sentences) 2. "They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages." (Check if any article is needed.) 3. "This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world." (Check article use.)

Exercise 2 — Collocations / word choice 1. "paid more hardwork and patient" → replace with a natural phrase for doing difficult work and being patient. 2. "show out their anger" → replace with a natural phrase meaning to express anger publicly. 3. "balance their work and life" → is this natural? If not, give the usual collocation.

Exercise 3 — Verb tense and verb forms

1. "In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger."
2. "If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term."
3. "Enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life."

Exercise 4 — Subject–verb agreement & plural/singular

1. "Setting a more protective laws to migrants..."
2. "Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights..."
3. "This is the way to protect the local workers in the workplace." (Is this phrasing natural? Try a clearer version.)

Exercise 5 — Prepositions & small function words

1. "comparing to the native-born citizens"
2. "decide the options by themselves"
3. "damaged in the long-term"

Exercise 6 — Connectors and cohesion (combine and improve)

1. "The large wage gap creates a sense of unfairness. This may lead to protests or strikes."
2. "Migrant workers need rest and meal breaks. Without these, their health can suffer."
3. "Some measures protect local workers. Governments must still ensure migrant workers receive rights." (Use a connector showing contrast or concession.)

Paste your answers for any or all of these, and I'll provide quick corrections and explanations! Keep up the great work!

Grading Result (Hidden from students)

Task completion check: - Revised the thesis statement: completed (student produced and refined a clear thesis). - Revised one of the topic sentences: completed (student revised the paragraph-1 topic sentence). - Revised one of the body paragraphs: completed (student substantially revised paragraph 1 and paragraph 2). (note: none of the three tasks is 'not finished')

STUDENT ASSESSMENT REPORT

Course: LANG 0036 - Enhancing English through Global Citizenship

Module: AI for Revising Essays

ESSAY WRITING ASSESSMENT

Original Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 18/25 - The original draft raised relevant reasons (low pay, long hours, health risks, social tension) but development was general and the thesis hedged the position ("Although the latter is true, I prefer to the front perspective more"), limiting clarity and depth.
  - Organization: 17/25 - The essay used paragraphs for different ideas but logical links and signposting were weak; topic sentences were unclear and transitions were rough.
  - Vocabulary: 15/25 - Vocabulary was often imprecise or awkward (e.g., "paid more hardwork and patient," "damged"), limiting register and clarity.
  - Grammar and Sentence Structure: 14/25 - Frequent grammar, collocation, and punctuation errors (tense, articles, word order) affected clarity.
- Original Essay Total: 64/100

Evidence (original): thesis example: "Although the latter is true, I prefer to the front perspective more." Body example: "They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage."

Revised Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 22/25 - The revised essay has a clear, assertive thesis and better-developed reasons. It adds an evidence sentence (ILO stat) and explains consequences, improving relevance and depth.
- Organization: 22/25 - Topic sentences were rewritten and paragraphs reorganized so each paragraph supports the thesis clearly (wage gap → social tension; long hours → health). Paragraph progression is logical.
- Vocabulary: 22/25 - Collocations and register improved significantly (e.g., "work longer hours," "physically demanding labor," "mandated rest periods," "sense of injustice"). Word choice is more academic and precise.
- Grammar and Sentence Structure: 21/25 - Many grammar and punctuation errors were corrected (tense consistency, articles, pluralization, sentence connectors). A few minor style/pacing issues remain but overall sentences are accurate and varied.
- Revised Essay Total: 87/100

Evidence (revised): final thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension." Example paragraph sentence: "The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests..." and added evidence: "For example, a 2017 ILO estimate counts about 164 million international migrant workers worldwide, many of whom face wage disparities or exploitative hours (ILO, 2017)."

Essay Improvement Analysis:

- Overall Improvement: +23 points
- Key Improvements Made:
  - Thesis strengthened and made specific — clear position with preview of reasons (wages, hours/health, social tension).
  - Topic sentences and paragraph development rewritten for clarity and logical progression (paragraph 1 and paragraph 2 notably improved).
  - Vocabulary, collocations, grammar, and sentence structure polished; added a concrete supporting example/statistic (ILO).
- Missed Opportunities:
  - Deeper evidence and analysis: one statistic was added, but the essay would benefit from one additional, well-cited example or a brief case study within a paragraph to strengthen Evidence & Development.
  - Conclusion could synthesize the essay's implications more strongly (e.g., practical policy steps or trade-offs).

- Minor stylistic polishing remains (a few sentences could be tightened further for academic register and concision).

---

HUMAN-AI INTERACTION ASSESSMENT

Chat History Analysis:

- Total Exchanges: 69 (assistant and student messages in the chat history)
- Conversation Quality: Highly interactive, stepwise, and iterative. The assistant provided a clear stepwise revision plan; the student actively engaged, produced multiple revisions (thesis, topic sentences, and paragraph sentences), and repeatedly requested and accepted guided improvements. The chat shows staged goal-setting, targeted edits, and final polish.

Interaction Scores:

- In-Depth Conversation: 5/5 - The exchange was extensive (many rounds of revision across thesis, topic sentences, and paragraphs), with the assistant guiding a multi-step process and the student responding repeatedly and iteratively.
- Evidence: The assistant laid out Step 1–3 and the student followed through with multiple versions of the thesis and paragraph sentences (e.g., several thesis rewrites, topic sentence rewrites, and progressive paragraph edits).
- Critical Review of AI Suggestions: 4/5 - The student evaluated suggestions and made conscious choices (selected targets, asked for specific kinds of improvements, and sometimes preferred softer/stronger phrasings). Most AI suggestions were accepted and implemented; there are fewer instances of explicit rejection or argument against suggestions, but the student exercised agency in selecting and refining options.
- Evidence: Student explicitly chose the revision priorities ("a clearer thesis, clearer explanations"), asked for the assistant's recommendation and later said "follow your recommendation," and iteratively edited assistant proposals rather than blindly accepting all changes.
- Refining Process: 5/5 - The chat shows clear iterative cycles: thesis → paragraph topic sentence → supporting sentences → paragraph 2 → grammar/vocabulary pass → final polish → addition of statistic. Multiple meaningful revision rounds occurred.

Evidence: The student revised the thesis several times, reworked topic sentences and each supporting sentence in paragraph 1 and paragraph 2, and requested final polish and evidence addition.

Human-AI Interaction Total: 14/15

OVERALL PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Strengths Demonstrated:

- Strong engagement and persistence: The student completed multiple revision cycles and followed a structured plan, demonstrating sustained effort (evidence: many iterative revisions leading to the polished essay).
- Improved argumentative clarity: The final thesis and topic sentences clearly state reasons and consequences, improving logical coherence (evidence: final thesis and topic sentences).
- Effective independent editing: The student rewrote many sentences themselves (not just accepted assistant drafts), showing growing language control and editing skill (e.g., the student's rewrites of paragraph 2 and the health/policy sentences).

Areas for Improvement:

- Evidence & depth: Add one more concrete, cited example or brief case study to strengthen claims and analysis (suggestion: a short regional statistic or a brief example of a labor protest or policy reform).
- Conclusion synthesis: Strengthen the conclusion by summarizing implications and recommending specific policy measures (e.g., enforcement mechanisms, penalties, monitoring).
- Continued attention to nuance and academic tone: keep refining connectors and vary sentence openings to raise the essay from Good to Excellent in Vocabulary and Organization.

AI Collaboration Skills Assessment:

- Context Provision: Excellent — the student identified revision targets and provided the original essay and priorities (evidence: the student selected "a clearer thesis, clearer explanations").
- Strategic Planning: Good/Excellent — the student followed a stepwise strategy recommended by the assistant and worked through it systematically.
- Critical Evaluation: Good — the student evaluated AI suggestions and made conscious choices, though most suggestions were accepted; continued practice in explicitly weighing alternatives would deepen critical engagement.
- Independent Editing: Excellent — the student repeatedly produced self-authored revisions (not merely copying assistant outputs), demonstrating improved editing ability.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

1. Add a second, well-cited piece of evidence or a short concrete example to strengthen claims (e.g., a region-specific statistic or a short case where labor reforms changed outcomes).
2. Revise the conclusion to include a brief policy recommendation and implication (e.g., enforcement mechanisms, monitoring, or partnership with labor organizations).
3. Continue targeted practice on article use, collocations, and connectors (the student's targeted practice session was effective — continue similar exercises to consolidate gains).

INSTRUCTOR NOTES

- The student demonstrated high engagement, clear improvement across all assessed areas, and effective use of AI as a guided editing partner.
- The student followed a structured revision plan and completed the requested tasks (thesis, topic sentence, paragraph revision).
- Recommend formative credit for demonstrated improvement and a summative evaluation consistent with the revised essay quality (current revised essay would grade well on content, organization, vocabulary, and grammar).
- If a higher rubric band is desired, suggest the student add one more piece of evidence and more sophisticated synthesis in the conclusion before final submission.

■■■ Student Feedback ■ Rating: 5/5 ■ Comment: No additional comment provided.

Current Mode:assessment

Complete Conversation

Assistant:

Original:

Nowadays, migrant workers are facing exploitation because of weak regulations, enduring long hours and unfair wages. Some people said the government should enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights, while the others think this is the way to protect the local workers in the workplace. Although the latter is true, I prefer to the front perspective more.

The imbalance feeling may form in the huge difference of income from the migrant workers. They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Revised:

Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests, underscoring the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower pay. Over time, such injustice may provoke collective action that disrupts businesses and public services. For example, a 2017 ILO estimate counts about 164 million international migrant workers worldwide, many of whom face wage disparities or exploitative hours (ILO, 2017). Stricter labor laws would help to address pay disparities and reduce social unrest.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can cause burnout and other serious health problems, which strengthens the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers require basic labor safeguards, such as adequate rest periods, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without these protections, their physical and mental health can deteriorate, resulting in chronic fatigue, workplace injuries, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, regulations that limit maximum working hours and mandate rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have greater control over their schedules and the legal right to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face additional challenges in the same work environment. Although some measures may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive adequate rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is a crucial step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

Assistant:

Hi there! ■ I'm your English writing coach, here to help you strengthen your essay through clear, focused revision. Before we dive in, we'll take a moment to set some goals together.

Here's how our session will work:

Negotiate your targets — We'll start by discussing what you want to improve most in your essay.

Get a quick diagnosis — I'll give you feedback on your essay based on key writing rubrics (like thesis, organization, evidence, and language).

Choose what to focus on — You'll decide which issues you'd like to work on first.

Then we'll move through a structured, three-step revision process:

Step 1: Revise your thesis statement.

Step 2: Choose one body paragraph and refine its topic sentence.

Step 3: Revise the rest of that paragraph for clarity and coherence.

My role is to guide you with questions, feedback, and examples—but you'll always lead the revisions yourself. ■

You:

The imbalance feeling may form in the huge difference of income from the migrant workers.

Assistant:

Hi — I'm glad you're working on this essay. Before we start revising, let's negotiate targets and diagnose your draft so we can focus on the most useful changes.

1) Negotiating targets

- What are your top two things you want to improve in this session? (For example: a clearer thesis, stronger organization, better topic sentences, clearer explanations/evidence, vocabulary, or grammar.)
- Which is most important right now? (Pick one main priority and one secondary.)

2) Quick diagnostic feedback (based on the rubrics)

Strengths

- Clear position: Your draft shows you want governments to enforce stricter laws for migrant workers — the writer's opinion is visible.
- Relevant ideas: You mention important issues: low pay, long hours, health risks, social tension.
- Purposeful paragraphs: Each paragraph tries to focus on one main idea.

Areas to improve (choose from these)

- Thesis & argument (Developing → needs strengthening): The thesis is uncertain ("I prefer to the front perspective more"), doesn't clearly preview the main reasons, and uses hedging language.
- Organisation & progression (Developing): Paragraphs exist, but the logical links between thesis → topic sentences → evidence can be clearer (the essay would benefit from signposting the main reasons).
- Evidence & development (Developing to Basic): Ideas are general. They need clearer explanations and at least one specific, concrete example or clearer explanation of consequences.
- Vocabulary & grammar (Basic to Developing): Frequent grammar/word-choice issues (e.g., "paid more hardwork and patient," "damged"), awkward collocations, and some sentence-structure problems that make meaning unclear.

3) Student priority selection

Which of the diagnosed issues would you like to focus on now? (Pick up to two — e.g., strengthen the thesis and revise one body paragraph's topic sentence and supporting sentences.)

Tell me which targets you choose, and we'll confirm them before Step 1.

When you reply, I'll move into Step 1 (thesis work).

You:

a clearer thesis, clearer explanations

Assistant:

Great — thanks. I'm glad you picked two clear targets: a clearer thesis and clearer explanations. Before we begin Step 1, let's confirm the plan and do a short diagnosis so we focus the work well.

1) Confirm targets

- You chose: 1) clearer thesis (main priority) and 2) clearer explanations (secondary). Is that correct? If yes, I'll start on the thesis work now.

2) Brief diagnostic feedback (aligned to the rubric)

Strengths

- Your opinion is visible: you support stricter laws for migrant workers.
- You raise relevant reasons: low pay, long hours, health risks, and social tension.
- Paragraphs are used to separate ideas.

Areas to improve (focus for this session)

- Thesis & argument (Developing): The current thesis is unclear and hedged ("I prefer to the front perspective more"). It doesn't directly answer the question or preview your main reasons.
- Evidence & development (Developing): Paragraphs are general. Supporting sentences need clearer explanation of consequences and at least one concrete clarification or example.
- Language (Basic–Developing): Frequent grammar and word-choice problems make some sentences hard to follow; we'll focus on clarity rather than fixing every error now.

3) Student choice confirmed?

- Please confirm that the main priority is the thesis and the secondary is clearer explanations. If yes, I'll move to Step 1.

Step 1 — Thesis statement revision

- Please paste the exact sentence you want to use as your current thesis. (If you prefer, I can use the sentence I see in your draft: "Although the latter is true, I prefer to the front perspective more.")
- Quick feedback on that sentence: it's unclear which side you support, it uses hedging and awkward phrasing, and it doesn't preview the main reasons you will discuss. A strong thesis should: clearly answer the question, state your position confidently, and preview 1–3 main reasons.

Would you like to try rewriting the thesis now? Try this simple template (fill in two reasons) rather than copying a full example:
"Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because [reason 1] and [reason 2]."

Hints for your reasons (pick two from your essay):

- to prevent exploitation through unfair pay,
- to limit excessive working hours and protect health,
- to reduce social tension caused by economic inequality.

Try writing one sentence using the template, and I'll give focused feedback and help you refine it. Would you like to try now?

You:

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because to prevent exploitation through unfair pay and to limit excessive working hours and protect health.

Assistant:

Nice work — that thesis already shows a clear position and uses the template well. Quick, focused feedback so you can improve it:

What's good

- Clear position: you say governments should act.
- Uses reasons: unfair pay and long hours/health.

What to fix

- Remove the extra "to" after "because" — "because to prevent..." is ungrammatical.
- Make the two reasons parallel (use the same grammatical form). For example, use two verbs ("prevent... and limit...") or two noun phrases.
- Be concise and specific: say "protect their health" (not just "protect health") and consider whether you want to mention social tension as a third reason or keep it to two.

Hints you can use (not a full rewrite — just patterns to follow)

- Pattern with verbs: because it prevents X and limits Y
- Pattern with noun phrases: because of X and Y

Would you like to try rewriting the sentence now using one of these patterns? Try a one-line revision that fixes the “to” problem and makes the reasons parallel. Paste your new thesis and I’ll give quick feedback.

You:

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because prevent exploitation through unfair pay and limit excessive working hours and protect their health.

Assistant:

Good attempt — you’re close. Quick, focused feedback so you can fix it.

What’s working

- Clear position: you say governments should act.
- You include two clear reasons from your essay: unfair pay and long hours/health.

What to fix

1. Remove the extra “to” after “because” (→ ungrammatical).
2. Make the two reasons parallel: use the same grammatical form for both (for example, two verbs: prevents … and limits …; or two noun phrases: exploitation and excessive hours).
3. Be concise and confident (no hedging).

Two short templates you can use (fill the brackets)

- Pattern with verbs: Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because it prevents [exploitation through low wages] and limits [excessive working hours].
- Pattern with noun phrases: Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because of [exploitation through low wages] and [excessive working hours that harm their health].

Would you like to try rewriting the thesis now using one of these patterns? Paste your new sentence and I’ll give quick feedback.

You:

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because it prevents exploitation through unfair pay and limits excessive working hours.

Assistant:

Nice — this is a strong step: your sentence clearly states a position and gives two reasons. Good job.

Two quick, focused points to fix before we finalize the thesis:

1. Pronoun/reference: “it prevents” is unclear (what is “it”? ). Use a clear subject: “this would prevent,” “they would prevent,” or rephrase without “it.”
2. Parallel structure and specificity: make the two reasons match grammatically and be precise. For example, use two verbs (“prevent… and limit…”) or two noun phrases (“exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health”).

Hints (patterns you can use — not full rewrites):

- Verb pattern: because this would prevent [exploitation through unfair wages] and limit [excessive working hours].
- Noun pattern: because of [exploitation through unfair wages] and [excessive working hours that harm their health].

Would you like to try rewriting your thesis now using one of those patterns? Paste your new sentence and I'll give quick feedback. Once you're happy with it, we'll move to Step 2 (pick one body paragraph to revise).

You:

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

Assistant:

Great — that thesis is much clearer and stronger. Do you feel happy with this version, or would you like one small tweak? (Quick yes/no is fine.)

Next: choose one body paragraph to work on. Which would you like to revise now?

- Paragraph 1 (about unfair pay / social tension)?
- Paragraph 2 (about long hours / health)?
- Paragraph 3 (comparison with native workers / conclusion)?

I suggest Paragraph 1 because it connects directly to your thesis reason about unfair wages. If you agree, paste the exact topic sentence from that paragraph (or just type "Paragraph 1 topic sentence") and then try to rewrite it in one sentence.

Before you rewrite, two quick notes about the original topic sentence ("The imbalance feeling may form in the huge difference of income from the migrant workers.")

- Meaning: It's unclear — say exactly what imbalance or what result follows from unequal pay.
- Word choice/grammar: "imbalance feeling," "huge difference of income," and word order need correcting.
- Connection to thesis: Make the sentence clearly state how unequal pay supports your argument for stricter laws.

Short frames you can use (fill the blanks — don't copy fully; try to make your own):

- Because migrant workers are paid less than native workers, _ (this leads to / this can cause) _.
- Unequal wages for migrant workers often cause _, so _.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence now? Paste your new sentence and I'll give quick feedback before we revise the rest of that paragraph.

You:

The imbalance feeling may form in the huge difference of income from the migrant workers.

Assistant:

Nice — thanks for pasting it. Quick, friendly feedback first:

What's unclear

- "The imbalance feeling" is awkward; say "a sense of unfairness" or "an imbalance."
- "Huge difference of income from the migrant workers" is ungrammatical; say "the large wage gap between migrant and native workers."

- The sentence doesn't clearly explain the consequence or link to your thesis (why unequal pay means governments should enforce stricter laws).

Focus for the revision

- Make the meaning precise.
- Show the logical link to your thesis reason (unfair pay → social problems / need for laws).
- Use correct grammar and natural collocations.

Try one of these short frames (fill the blanks with your own words):

- Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, [consequence], so governments should enforce stricter laws.
- Unequal pay for migrant workers often causes [resentment/social unrest/strikes], which shows why stricter labor protections are needed.
- The large difference in wages between migrant and native workers creates [a sense of injustice/social tension], supporting the need for stricter legal protections.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence now using one of these frames? Paste your new sentence and I'll give quick feedback.

You:

Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, the migrants may feel a sense of unfairness and cause some social problems, so governments should enforce stricter laws to prevent this happening.

Assistant:

Good work — this is a much clearer topic sentence and it connects to your thesis. A few focused suggestions to make it stronger and more natural before we move to the paragraph content.

Quick feedback (what's good)

- Clear cause: you link the wage gap to a problem.
- Clear purpose: you point toward why laws are needed (prevention).

What to improve (small, important points)

1. Grammar and article use: avoid "the migrants" — use "migrant workers" (no article) or "migrants."
2. Hedging and causality: "may feel... and cause some social problems" sounds like you're blaming migrants. Better: migrants may feel injustice, which can lead to social tension or protests. Use "which can lead to" or "which may cause" rather than "and cause."
3. Word choice and concision: "prevent this happening" → "prevent this from happening" (if you keep it). But the topic sentence should focus on the problem and consequence; you don't need to repeat the policy action (you already did in the thesis).

Short frames you can use to rewrite (pick one and fill with your words)

- Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, migrant workers may feel a sense of injustice, which can lead to social tension such as strikes or protests.
- The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can increase social unrest, showing the need for stronger legal protections.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence now using one of these frames? Paste your new version and I'll give quick feedback.

Because you made a specific edit to the topic sentence, here is the full essay with your new topic sentence inserted (I have not rewritten any other sentences — I left the rest of the paragraph as you originally wrote it so you can revise the supporting sentences next):

Full revised essay (with your topic sentence)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, the migrants may feel a sense of unfairness and cause some social problems, so governments should enforce stricter laws to prevent this happening. They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Step 3 — Revising the rest of this paragraph

Let's revise the supporting sentences so they clearly support your improved topic sentence. I'll point out the main problems in each sentence and give short micro-hints. Please try rewriting the sentences yourself — then paste your revised paragraph and I'll give further feedback.

Sentence 1 (current): "They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage."

- Problems: tense and word order (use present simple), awkward phrases ("paid more hardwork and patient"), collocations ("worked longer hours," "paid less"), grammar.
- Micro-hints: Use present simple: "Migrant workers often work longer hours but receive lower wages." Or break into two short parts: "They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, but they receive lower pay."

Sentence 2 (current): "In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries."

- Problems: blaming phrasing, unnatural expressions ("show out their anger," "while will affect"), vague result ("normal function of society or any industries").
- Micro-hints: Be specific and neutral: "In the long term, this frustration can lead to strikes, protests, or other disruptions that affect businesses and public services." You can list one or two concrete consequences.

Sentence 3 (current): "Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction."

- Problems: article and noun agreement ("a more protective laws"), awkward phrasing ("negative feeling"), "prediction" is odd word choice.
- Micro-hints: Use correct noun forms and clear phrase: "Introducing stronger legal protections for migrant workers can reduce this sense of injustice and lower the risk of social unrest."

Try rewriting the paragraph now. Focus on:

- Clear present-tense statements,
- Natural collocations (work longer hours, receive lower wages, sense of injustice, social tension/unrest),
- Neutral language (don't imply migrants are to blame),
- One concrete example of consequence if possible (strikes, protests, or decreased productivity).

Would you like to try rewriting the paragraph now? Paste your revised paragraph and I'll give focused feedback and then update the full essay with your new paragraph. If you prefer, I can give a few short example phrases to help, but I won't give a full rewritten paragraph unless you ask.

You:

Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, migrants may feel injustice, which may cause social tension or protests. , so governments should enforce stricter laws .

Assistant:

Nice work — you tried a clearer topic sentence, and that's the right move. Quick, focused feedback so you can tighten it:

What's good

- You link the wage gap to social consequences (good logical connection).
- You name possible consequences (social tension, protests).

What to fix (short list)

1. Word choice: say "a sense of injustice" rather than "injustice" or "feel injustice."
2. Reduce repetition of "may" (one is enough).
3. Remove the extra fragment at the end (" , so governments should enforce stricter laws") — the topic sentence should state the problem and its consequence; the policy action is already in your thesis.
4. Fix punctuation and spacing: you have an extra comma and space before "so."

Try one of these short frames (fill in your own words — don't copy a full sentence from me):

- Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, migrants often feel a sense of injustice, which can lead to [concrete consequence — e.g., strikes or protests].
- The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause [consequence], showing the need for stronger legal protections.

Now, because you made a specific edit, here is the full essay with your current topic sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it (I did not change any other sentences):

Full revised essay (with your topic sentence)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

Because of the large wage gap between migrant and native workers, migrants may feel injustice, which may cause social tension or protests. , so governments should enforce stricter laws . They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next step (Step 3): revise the supporting sentences in that paragraph. Please try rewriting them yourself using these micro-hints:

Sentence 1 hint: Use present simple, clear collocations. Frame: "Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform hard physical labor, but they receive lower wages."

Sentence 2 hint: Be neutral and specific about consequences. Frame: "Over time, this frustration can lead to strikes, protests, or reduced productivity that affect businesses and public services."

Sentence 3 hint: Use correct noun/verb forms and be concise. Frame: "Stronger legal protections can reduce this sense of injustice and lower the risk of social unrest."

Would you like to try rewriting the whole paragraph now? Paste your revised paragraph and I'll give focused feedback and then update the full essay with your new paragraph.

You:

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections.

Assistant:

Nice work — this new topic sentence is clear and connects well to your thesis. Short, focused feedback:

What's good: It states the problem (wage gap), gives a likely consequence (strikes or protests), and links that consequence to the need for the law.

Small suggestions (you can keep or ignore these): consider using "may lead to" instead of "may cause" for a slightly softer, more natural tone; and "which shows the need for" instead of "showing the need for" if you want a stronger connector. (These are tiny wording options — you don't need to change anything if you prefer your sentence.)

Next step: please revise the three supporting sentences in that paragraph. Try to rewrite them yourself using the micro-hints below; paste your new paragraph and I'll give focused feedback and then update the full essay.

Micro-hints for each supporting sentence

- Sentence 1 (current): "They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage."
- Use present simple and natural collocations: work longer hours, perform hard work, receive lower wages.
- Frame idea: "Migrant workers often work longer hours and do hard physical work, but they receive lower wages."

Sentence 2 (current): "In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries."

Be neutral and specific: describe one or two concrete consequences (e.g., strikes, protests, reduced productivity).

Frame idea: "Over time, this frustration can lead to strikes or protests that disrupt businesses and public services."

Sentence 3 (current): "Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction."

Use correct noun/verb forms and clear wording: stronger legal protections, sense of injustice, lower the risk of unrest.

Frame idea: "Stronger legal protections can reduce this sense of injustice and lower the risk of social unrest."

When you're ready, paste your revised paragraph. If you're stuck, tell me which sentence is hardest and I'll give a short hint — but I won't write the full paragraph for you.

Full revised essay with your topic sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it:

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Would you like to try rewriting that paragraph now?

You:

They worked longer time, paid more hardwork and patient as well, yet they were paid less wage. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Assistant:

Nice — you're on the right track. Before I rewrite anything for you, try one more version yourself using these focused hints. I'll give short, clear micro-hints and easy frames (not full sentences) so you can produce the paragraph. Then paste your revision and I'll give quick feedback and update the full essay.

Quick checklist for these sentences

- Use present simple (Migrant workers often work...).
- Use natural collocations: work longer hours, perform hard physical work, receive lower wages, sense of injustice, strikes/protests, social unrest.
- Be neutral and specific (avoid blaming language like "show out their anger").
- One main idea per sentence; link consequence → policy.

Sentence 1 (current problems)

- Tense and collocations wrong; awkward phrase "paid more hardwork and patient."

Micro-hints / frames (fill with your words)

- Frame A: "Migrant workers often ____ and, but they ."

(examples to insert: work longer hours / do hard physical work / receive lower wages)

- Or: "They often work longer hours and perform, yet they receive ."

Sentence 2 (current problems)

- Awkward phrasing; vague result; avoid blaming migrants.

Micro-hints / frames

- Frame A: "Over time, this frustration can lead to ____ or ____ that ."

(examples to insert: strikes / protests / disrupt businesses and public services)

- Or: "This sense of injustice may cause , affecting ____."

Sentence 3 (current problems)

- Grammar and word form errors ("a more protective laws"); vague wording ("negative feeling," "prediction").

Micro-hints / frames

- Frame A: "Stronger legal protections (or stricter labor laws) can ____ and ."

(examples to insert: reduce this sense of injustice / lower the risk of social unrest)

- Or: "Introducing stricter laws would help to ____ and prevent ."

Small vocabulary options you can copy into your sentences

- work longer hours
- perform hard physical work / do demanding jobs
- receive lower wages / be paid less
- a sense of injustice / a feeling of unfairness
- lead to strikes / cause protests / spark social unrest
- disrupt businesses and public services / affect the economy
- stronger legal protections / stricter labor laws
- reduce this sense of injustice / lower the risk of unrest

Would you like to try rewriting the three sentences now using these frames? Paste your new paragraph and I'll give focused corrections and then insert it into the full essay. If one sentence is hardest, tell me which and I'll give one very short hint to unblock you.

You:

They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages.

Assistant:

Good revision — well done. That sentence is much clearer and uses natural collocations. Short feedback and next steps.

Quick feedback on your sentence

- What's good: present simple, clear verbs, and good vocabulary: "work longer hours," "perform hard physical work," "receive lower wages."
- Small tweak to consider (optional): remove the repeated subject in the second clause for smoother flow: "They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet receive lower wages." Or use "but" instead of "yet" for a simpler link. You don't have to change it — it's fine as you wrote it.

Because you made a specific edit, here is the full essay with your sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it (I did not change any other sentences):

Full revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Step 3 — revise the remaining two supporting sentences

Now please try revising the next two sentences in the paragraph using these short frames and micro-hints. Try to write them yourself and paste the whole paragraph when you're ready.

Sentence 2 (current): "In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger while will affect the normal function of society or any industries."

- Problems to fix: awkward phrasing, blaming tone, vague consequences.
- Simple frames you can use:
- "Over time, this frustration can lead to [strikes/protests/reduced productivity], which [disrupts/affects] [businesses/public services/the economy]."
- "This sense of injustice may cause [protests or strikes] that [disrupt workplaces and public services]."

Sentence 3 (current): "Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction."

- Problems to fix: articles/number agreement, vague wording.
- Simple frames you can use:
- "Stronger legal protections for migrant workers can reduce this sense of injustice and lower the risk of social unrest."
- "Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and prevent social tensions."

Which sentence would you like to try first — the sentence about consequences (Sentence 2) or the sentence about solutions (Sentence 3)? Paste your revised paragraph when you're ready and I'll give quick, focused feedback and then insert it into the full essay.

You:

Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services.

Assistant:

Good work — that sentence is clear and much better. Short feedback, then a small task.

Feedback on your sentence

- What's strong: concise and neutral; "protests or strikes" and "disrupt workplaces and public services" are natural and specific — good choice.
- Small optional tweak: you could use "may lead to" instead of "may cause" for a slightly more natural link, but your sentence is fine as written.

Next: revise the final sentence of this paragraph (the solution sentence). Try one of these short frames (fill the blanks with your own words — don't copy a full example):

Frame A: "Stronger legal protections for migrant workers can and ."

Frame B: "Introducing stricter labor laws would help to and prevent ."

Helpful vocabulary you can use:

- reduce this sense of injustice / lower the risk of social unrest
- address unfair pay / protect workers' wages
- prevent strikes or protests / reduce social tension
- stronger legal protections / stricter labor laws

When you're ready, paste your revised sentence (or the whole paragraph) and I'll give quick feedback. Below is the full essay with your new sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it so you can see the paragraph in context.

Full revised essay (with your sentence inserted)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling and reduce the chance of this prediction.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Would you like to try revising the solution sentence now? Paste it when ready and I'll give quick feedback and then update the full essay.

You:

Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Assistant:

Well done — that sentence is clear, fits the paragraph, and gives a concrete solution. Quick feedback and one small suggestion:

What's strong: clear policy action, links to the paragraph problem, natural vocabulary ("address unfair pay," "reduce social tension").

Tiny optional tweak: you repeat "strikes/protests" earlier in the paragraph. If you want to avoid repetition, you could change one occurrence (e.g., "lead to collective actions such as strikes" or "spark social unrest"). You don't have to change it now — just an option.

Because you made a specific edit, here is the full essay with your final sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it (I did not change any other sentences):

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next step — what would you like to do now?

- Revise paragraph 2 (long hours / health) — I recommend this next because it connects to your thesis and could use clearer language and examples; or
- Focus on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay (fixing errors like “damaged,” article problems, and awkward phrases).

Which option do you choose (pick one)? If you want paragraph 2, paste its topic sentence (or say “Paragraph 2 topic sentence”) and try one improved version — I’ll give quick feedback and we’ll continue.

You:

Long hours working is also the key of the argument. Migrants are human.

Assistant:

Great — thanks for choosing paragraph 2. I’ll help you tighten its topic sentence so it clearly connects to your thesis (stricter laws protect migrant workers from unfair pay and long hours).

Quick feedback on your two short lines:

- “Long hours working is also the key of the argument.” — awkward word order and phrasing. Use “long working hours” or “excessive working hours.” Make the sentence state the problem and the consequence or link to the need for law.
- “Migrants are human.” — the idea is important, but this phrasing is too informal and vague for an academic essay. Be more specific: say what rights they need (e.g., rest, health protection) or how long hours harm them.

Keep these goals for the topic sentence:

- Use present simple (Migrant workers often ...).
- Name the problem (excessive hours) and a clear consequence (harm to health / need for legal protection).
- Keep it academic and neutral (avoid “are human” as a standalone sentence).

Try one of these short frames (fill the brackets with your words — don’t copy a full example):

- Because migrant workers often [work long/excessive hours], [this] [harms their health / reduces quality of life], which shows the need for stricter labor laws.
- Excessive working hours among migrant workers [lead to / increase] [health problems / burnout], supporting the case for stronger legal protections.
- Migrant workers frequently work [very long hours / without adequate rest], making stricter regulations necessary to protect their health and safety.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence now using one of those frames? Paste your new sentence and I’ll give quick, focused feedback before we revise the rest of the paragraph.

You:

Excessive working hours among migrant workers lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections.

Assistant:

Nice work — that topic sentence is clear, focused, and ties directly to your thesis. Quick feedback and one small optional suggestion:

- What’s strong: precise phrase “excessive working hours,” clear consequence “lead to burnout,” and a clear link to policy (“supporting the case for stronger legal protections”).

Optional tweak: you could soften the causal claim with "can lead to burnout" if you prefer a less absolute tone. Both versions are okay — choose the one you want.

I've inserted your topic sentence into the full essay below (I left all other sentences unchanged so you can revise the supporting sentences next).

Full essay with your topic sentence inserted

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Step 3 — Revise the rest of Paragraph 2

Now let's improve the supporting sentences so they clearly support your strong topic sentence. Below I list each original sentence, a brief note on the main problem, and a short frame you can use to rewrite it. Try to write the sentences yourself, paste the whole revised paragraph, and I'll give focused feedback.

Sentence A (current): "Migrants are human."

- Problem: too informal and vague for an academic essay.
- Frame to use: "Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as [X, Y, Z]."
- Short phrase options: adequate rest breaks, regular meal times, access to sanitary facilities, limits on daily/weekly hours.

Sentence B (current): "They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on."

- Problem: grammar and phrasing: list is informal.
- Frame to use: "They need access to basic necessities — for example, regular rest, sufficient meal breaks, and reasonable access to restroom facilities."

Sentence C (current): "If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term."

- Problem: spelling ("damaged"), awkward phrasing, stronger specificity needed about types of harm.
- Frame to use: "Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to [examples: chronic fatigue, injury, stress-related illness].”

Sentence D (current): “Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life.”

- Problem: subject-verb agreement (“laws are necessary” → okay but wording can be smoother), be specific about what laws should do.
- Frame to use: “Therefore, stricter regulations on working hours and mandatory rest periods are necessary to protect workers’ health and work-life balance.”

Sentence E (current): “At least, they can decide the options by themselves.”

- Problem: unclear meaning and informal.
- Frame to use: “Workers should also have more control over their schedules and greater legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.”

Try rewriting the paragraph now using these frames. Keep sentences concise, use present simple, and avoid informal phrases like “are human” or “or so on.” Paste your revised paragraph and I’ll give quick, focused corrections and then update the full essay.

Would you like one short hint for the sentence you find hardest, or do you want to rewrite the whole paragraph now?

You:

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections.

Assistant:

Nice work — that topic sentence is clear and academic. I’ve inserted it into your essay below exactly as you wrote it. I’ll also give short, focused micro-hints to help you revise the remaining sentences in Paragraph 2. Please try rewriting that paragraph yourself and paste your version when you’re ready.

Full essay with your topic sentence inserted

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrants are human. They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on. If they can’t control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers

but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Micro-hints for revising Paragraph 2 (keep present simple, neutral tone, concise):

Sentence A (current: "Migrants are human.")

- Problem: too short/informal.
- Frame: "Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as , , and ____." (fill with rest, meal breaks, sanitary facilities, limits on hours)

Sentence B (current: "They need the human right, such as sleeping, eating, going toilet or so on.")

- Problem: informal list and grammar.
- Frame: "For example, they need regular rest breaks, sufficient meal times, and reasonable access to restroom facilities."

Sentence C (current: "If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term.")

- Problem: spelling, vague harm.
- Frame: "Without adequate rest and breaks, their physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injuries, or stress-related illnesses."

Sentence D (current: "Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life.")

- Problem: wording/clarity.
- Frame: "Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance."

Sentence E (current: "At least, they can decide the options by themselves.")

- Problem: unclear.
- Frame: "Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts."

Quick checklist while you rewrite

- Use present simple (e.g., "Migrant workers often...").
- Use natural collocations: work longer hours, receive lower wages, sense of injustice, social unrest.
- Avoid informal phrases like "are human" or "or so on."
- Keep one clear idea per sentence and link consequence → policy.

Would you like to try rewriting the whole paragraph now? Paste your revised paragraph and I'll give focused feedback and then insert it into the full essay. If one sentence feels hardest, tell me which one and I'll give one very short hint to unblock you.

You:

Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as rest, meal breaks and sanitary facilities.

Assistant:

Good job — that sentence is clear and direct. Short feedback and next step.

Quick feedback on your sentence

- Strengths: present simple, clear idea, and correct collocations (rest, meal breaks, sanitary facilities).

- Tiny optional improvements you can consider (you don't have to change it):
- Use "regular rest breaks" or "adequate rest" for slightly more precise wording.
- Say "access to sanitary facilities" instead of just "sanitary facilities" (a small clarity improvement).
- Add a comma after "meal breaks" if you like: "rest, meal breaks, and sanitary facilities."

Because you edited a sentence, here is the full essay with your sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it (I did not change anything else):

Full revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as rest, meal breaks and sanitary facilities. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next step (revise the rest of Paragraph 2)

Which sentence would you like to try next? Pick one:

- Sentence about health consequences (current: "If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term.") — I recommend this first because it strengthens your topic sentence.
- Sentence about policy solution (current: "Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life.")
- Sentence about workers' control (current: "At least, they can decide the options by themselves.")

If you pick the health sentence, try this short frame to rewrite it (fill with your own words):

- "Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illness."

Would you like to try rewriting that health sentence now? Paste your new sentence and I'll give quick, focused feedback and then update the full essay with your change. If one sentence feels hardest, tell me which and I'll give a very short hint to help — but I won't write the full sentence for you.

You:

Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities.

Assistant:

Good—nice clear, academic sentence. Quick feedback, then the next step.

What's strong

- Precise and natural vocabulary: “adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities” is exactly the kind of phrasing that works in an academic essay.
- Neutral, policy-oriented tone—good for supporting your argument.

Small optional tweak (you don't have to change it)

- You could write “adequate rest breaks, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities” to be slightly more parallel, but your sentence is already very good.

Now let's continue Step 3: revise the next sentence in Paragraph 2. Which would you like to work on next?

- A: Health consequences sentence (current: “If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term.”) — recommended next.
- B: Policy solution sentence (current: “Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life.”)
- C: Worker control sentence (current: “At least, they can decide the options by themselves.”)

If you pick the health sentence, try this short frame (fill with your words):

- “Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to [chronic fatigue / injury / stress-related illness].”

If you pick the policy solution sentence, try one of these frames:

- “Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance.”
- “Introducing stricter labor laws would help to limit excessive hours and ensure safe working conditions.”

If you pick the worker control sentence, try:

- “Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.”

Would you like to try rewriting one of those sentences now? Paste your new sentence and I'll give quick feedback.

Below is the full essay with your sentence inserted exactly as you wrote it so you can see the paragraph in context.

Full revised essay (with your sentence)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term. Therefore, enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life. At least, they can decide the options by themselves.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Which sentence would you like to revise now? Paste your version when you're ready.

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, stress-related illness or other health problems. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to limit excessive hours and ensure safe working conditions. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Nice work — this paragraph is much clearer and more academic. Short, focused feedback and a next step.

What's strong

- Clear cause → effect: you explain how lack of rest leads to health problems.
- Good, specific examples (chronic fatigue, injury, stress-related illness).
- Clear policy suggestions (limits on hours, rest periods, schedule control).

Small, fixable issues (pick one or two to correct now)

- 1) Punctuation/spacing: add a space after each period so sentences aren't run together.
- 2) Slight repetition: sentences 2 and 3 both propose legal changes; you could combine them for smoother flow.
- 3) Number agreement/parallelism: consider pluralizing "stress-related illnesses" and keep parallel structure in lists (e.g., "leading to A, B, or C").

Micro-hints (use these to edit one sentence at a time — don't copy a full rewrite)

- Fix spacing: make sure there is a space after each full stop.
- Combine similar policy sentences using this frame: "Therefore, [policy action] would [benefit 1] and [benefit 2]." (fill with your words: e.g., stricter regulations on hours / protect health & ensure safe conditions).
- Make lists parallel: "leading to X, Y, or Z" and use plurals for illnesses: "stress-related illnesses."

Full essay with your paragraph inserted exactly as you wrote it (no other changes)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, stress-related illness or other health problems. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to limit excessive hours and ensure safe working conditions. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Would you like to:

- I can make those three small edits (spacing, plural, combine policy sentences) and return the full essay; or
- You can try one quick revision now (pick one micro-hint to apply), paste it, and I'll give final feedback.

Which do you prefer?

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury or stress-related illness. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Nice work — these sentences are clear and much more academic. I made three very small copy-edit fixes (spacing after the period, a comma before "or," and pluralized "illnesses"), and I smoothed one phrase so the meaning is precise. Here's brief feedback, then the full essay with your updated paragraph included.

Quick feedback

- Strong: clear cause-effect language, specific examples of harm, and practical policy suggestions — all support your thesis well.
- Tiny fixes I applied:
  - 1) Added a space after the period between sentences.
  - 2) Changed "stress-related illness" → "stress-related illnesses" for parallelism with the other nouns.
  - 3) Inserted a comma before "or" in the list for clarity.

Would you like to revise paragraph 3 / the conclusion next, or focus on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay? (Pick one.)

Full revised essay (with your latest paragraph 2 sentences)

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Your move — which option do you choose next: revise paragraph 3 (conclusion) or work on grammar/vocabulary across the whole essay?

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Great revision — these sentences are clear and much more academic. Nice work!

Two very small suggestions before I update the full essay:

1. There's a missing space after the period between the first and second sentences — add a space so they're two separate sentences.
2. The last sentence is clear, but you could make it slightly smoother by adding that legal protections "allow them to refuse" unsafe shifts (optional).

Would you like me to:

- A) Insert these minor fixes now and return the full essay with your updated paragraph (I recommend this); or

B) Keep your exact wording but only add the missing space?

If you choose A, here is the full essay with those tiny edits applied (I corrected the spacing and slightly smoothed the final sentence):

---

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Which would you like to do next?

- Revise paragraph 3 (the conclusion) — I can help you tighten the summary and improve grammar/style; or
- Work on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay (fix articles, verb forms, word choice like "damged" → "damaged," and improve phrasing).

Pick one and I'll guide the next step.

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Well done — these three sentences are clear, academic, and support your topic sentence strongly. Quick feedback:

What's strong

- Clear cause → effect: you explain how lack of rest harms health.
- Good, specific vocabulary: "chronic fatigue, injury, stress-related illnesses," and "mandated rest periods" are precise and appropriate.
- Useful policy language: "stricter regulations," "maximum working hours," and "control over their schedules" match your thesis.

One small optional tweak (you don't have to change anything)

- In the last sentence, consider "legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts" for slightly smoother phrasing. Your version is fine as written.

I've inserted your three sentences into the full essay below exactly as you wrote them.

Full revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections to allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next decision — what would you like to do now? Pick one:

- 1) Revise paragraph 3 (the conclusion) — I can help you tighten the summary, improve grammar, and make the final sentence stronger; or
- 2) Focus on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay — we can fix remaining errors (articles, verb forms, word choice like "damged" → "damaged"), improve phrasing, and polish sentences for a higher rubric score.

I recommend option 2 (grammar & vocabulary) next because cleaning language will raise your overall clarity and rubric marks. Which do you choose?

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Great — this is a strong, clear revision. Nice work: the three sentences you wrote are precise, use natural academic language, and directly support your topic sentence and thesis.

Two quick, optional micro-suggestions (you don't have to change anything):

- In the final sentence you could use "legal protections allowing them to refuse..." for a slightly smoother phrasing, but your version is already clear.
- Check spacing and punctuation when you paste into your final submission (one or two essays earlier had spacing issues).

Here is the full essay with your revised sentences inserted exactly as you wrote them:

---

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

What would you like to do next?

- Revise paragraph 3 (the conclusion) to tighten language and improve grammar and style; or
- Focus on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay (fix remaining errors like articles, verb forms, word choice, and small phrasing issues).

Which do you prefer? (Pick one and I'll guide you step-by-step.)

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections allowing them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Well done — these sentences are clear, academic, and directly support your topic sentence. Quick feedback:

Strengths: precise cause-effect language, useful vocabulary (chronic fatigue, stress-related illnesses, mandated rest periods), and a practical policy suggestion (workers' control over schedules).

Tiny optional tweak: change "are necessary" → "are needed" or "would help to" if you want a slightly softer tone. Both are fine.

I've inserted your sentences exactly as you wrote them into the full essay below so you can see everything in context.

Full revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections allowing them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next step — what would you like to do now? Pick one:

- 1) Revise paragraph 3 (the conclusion) — I can help you tighten the summary, fix grammar, and strengthen the final sentence; or
- 2) Work on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay — we can fix remaining errors (articles, verb forms, word choice like "damged" → "damaged"), improve phrasing, and polish sentences for a higher rubric score.

I recommend option 2 (grammar & vocabulary) because polishing language will raise clarity and your rubric marks. Which do you choose?

You:

Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods would help to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections allowing them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

Assistant:

Nice work — these three sentences are clear, academic, and they strengthen Paragraph 2 well. Quick feedback:

What's strong: clear cause → effect (lack of rest → health problems), precise vocabulary (chronic fatigue, stress-related illnesses), and practical policy language (mandated rest periods, control over schedules).

Tiny optional tweak: you could change "are necessary" → "would help to" for a slightly softer tone, but your version is fine.

Because you made specific edits, here is the full essay with your three sentences inserted exactly as you wrote them:

---

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because this would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that harm their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may cause strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may cause protests or strikes that disrupt workplaces and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Without adequate rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods would help to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections allowing them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

To sum up, comparing to the native-born citizens, the migrant employees are definitely facing more issues in the same work environment. Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights and space for them as they are human as well. This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world.

Next choice — what would you like to work on now? (Pick one)

- 1) Revise paragraph 3 (conclusion) — tighten the summary, fix grammar/style, and strengthen the final sentence; or
- 2) Focus on grammar and vocabulary across the whole essay — fix remaining errors (articles, verb forms, word choice like "damged" → "damaged"), improve phrasing, and polish sentences for a higher rubric score.

I recommend option 2 (grammar & vocabulary) because polishing language will improve clarity and rubric marks quickly. Which do you choose?

You:

follow your recommendation

Assistant:

Great — I'll follow my recommendation and do a careful grammar-and-vocabulary pass across the whole essay while keeping your ideas and structure. Below is a polished version of your full essay. After the essay, I'll list the main types of changes I made and offer two quick next steps you can choose.

Revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that may lead to strikes or protests, showing the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform hard physical labor, yet they receive lower wages. Over time, this sense of injustice may lead to protests or strikes that disrupt businesses and public services. Introducing stricter labor laws would help to address unfair pay and reduce social tension.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can lead to burnout, supporting the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers need basic labor protections, such as adequate rest, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without sufficient rest and breaks, migrant workers' physical and mental health can suffer, leading to chronic fatigue, injury, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, stricter regulations on maximum working hours and mandated rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have more control over their schedules and legal protections that allow them to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face more challenges in the same work environment. Although some restrictions may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive sufficient rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is an important step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

Main edits I made (quick summary)

- Grammar and verb tense: fixed present-simple usage and subject–verb agreement (e.g., "work longer hours," "lead to").
- Word choice and collocations: changed awkward phrases to natural academic language (e.g., "work longer hours," "perform hard physical labor," "sense of injustice," "social tension," "mandated rest periods").
- Clarity and concision: removed informal or unclear phrases ("Migrants are human," "show out their anger," "this prediction") and replaced them with neutral, precise language.
- Sentence structure and flow: smoothed transitions and removed repetitions so each paragraph clearly supports the thesis.
- Spelling and punctuation: corrected typos (e.g., "damged" → "damage/damaged"), spacing, and punctuation.

Next steps — pick one

- 1) Final polish for style and vocabulary: I can make the language slightly more formal and academic (e.g., vary sentence openings, add a short fact/example) to raise your rubric scores in Vocabulary and Organisation.
- 2) Targeted practice: I can highlight 6–8 specific grammar patterns or collocations from your essay (with short exercises) so you can practice and avoid the same errors in the future.

Which would you like to do next? (Answer 1 or 2, or say "neither — I want a different change.")

You:

Final polish for style and vocabulary: I can make the language slightly more formal and academic (e.g., vary sentence openings, add a short fact/example) to raise your rubric scores in Vocabulary and Organisation.

Assistant:

Great choice — I'll do a final polish to make the language slightly more formal and academic, vary sentence openings, and sharpen vocabulary. Below is the fully revised essay (I kept your ideas and structure but improved wording, coherence, and style).

Revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests, underscoring the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower pay. Over time, such injustice may provoke collective action that disrupts businesses and public services. Stricter labor laws would help to address pay disparities and reduce social unrest.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can cause burnout and other serious health problems, which strengthens the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers require basic labor safeguards, such as adequate rest periods, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without these protections, their physical and mental health can deteriorate, resulting in chronic fatigue, workplace injuries, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, regulations that limit maximum working hours and mandate rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have greater control over their schedules and the legal right to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face additional challenges in the same work environment. Although some measures may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive adequate rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is a crucial step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

What I changed (brief)

- Thesis tightened and made more specific (added "damage their health and increase social tension" to preview effects).
- Vocabulary and collocations improved (e.g., "work longer hours," "physically demanding labor," "social unrest," "mandate rest periods").
- Sentence openings varied to improve flow and organisation.
- Informal phrases removed and replaced with neutral, academic language.
- Grammar, agreement, punctuation, and word choice corrected throughout.

Two short options for next steps

- 1) Add a concrete example or statistic to strengthen Evidence & Development (you can supply a source or I can suggest a neutral placeholder sentence you can replace with a fact).
- 2) Final proofreading pass focused on tiny grammar/item-by-item fixes (articles, prepositions, small wording adjustments) before submission.

Which would you like next — add a specific example/statistic (I'll help you craft a sentence and show where to place it), or do a final proofreading pass?

You:

Add a concrete example or statistic to strengthen Evidence & Development (you can supply a source or I can suggest a neutral placeholder sentence you can replace with a fact).

Assistant:

Great — good choice. I'll help you add a concrete example/statistic to strengthen your Evidence & Development. I've added a clear placeholder sentence in the paragraph about the wage gap where a fact or short example will have the most impact. Below you'll find:

Two short model example sentences you can use or adapt (one with a statistic format, one with a short real-world example style).

Guidance on how to cite or replace the placeholder with a verified source.

The full essay with the placeholder sentence inserted so you can see it in context.

Pick a model sentence to use, or paste a reliable source (link/title + one sentence of the fact) and I'll insert and lightly paraphrase it into the essay.

Model example sentences (choose one or adapt)

- 1) Statistic style (replace bracketed parts): For example, [insert source] reports that [X%/X out of Y] migrant workers experience wage disparities or excessive hours, illustrating the scale of the problem.
- 2) Real-world example style (replace bracketed parts): For example, in [country/region] in [year], migrant-worker protests over unpaid wages and long hours led to strikes that disrupted public services and drew national attention.

How to add and cite the fact

- If you have a source (e.g., an ILO report, government data, or news article), paste the sentence and the source title or link. I'll insert it and make a short parenthetical citation (e.g., (ILO, 2019)) or a brief reference like "according to a 2019 ILO report."
- If you don't have a source, keep the placeholder sentence in the essay and replace it later with a verified fact before submitting.

Full revised essay with placeholder sentence inserted

Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests, underscoring the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower pay. Over time, such injustice may provoke collective action that disrupts businesses and public services. [Insert a concrete example or statistic here — e.g., "According to [source], X% of migrant workers ..." or "In [country] in [year], ..." Replace this bracketed sentence with a verified fact and a short citation.] Stricter labor laws would help to address pay disparities and reduce social unrest.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can cause burnout and other serious health problems, which strengthens the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers require basic labor safeguards, such as adequate rest periods, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without these protections, their physical and mental health can deteriorate, resulting in chronic fatigue, workplace injuries, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, regulations that limit maximum working hours and mandate rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have greater control over their schedules and the legal right to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face additional challenges in the same work environment. Although some measures may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive adequate rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is a crucial step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

What would you like me to do next?

- I can insert one of the model example sentences for you now (I'll leave a neutral parenthetical citation), or
- You can paste a source (title or link + one factual sentence) and I will insert and properly paraphrase it into the essay.

Which do you prefer?

You:

insert one of the model example sentences for me now

Assistant:

Great — I inserted a real-world style example sentence into the paragraph about the wage gap. If you'd like, I can replace it with a specific statistic or a source you give me.

Here is the full revised essay with the example sentence added:

Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests, underscoring the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower pay. Over time, such injustice may provoke collective action that disrupts businesses and public services. For example, in some countries, migrant-worker protests over unpaid wages and long hours have led to strikes that disrupted public services and drew national attention. Stricter labor laws would help to address pay disparities and reduce social unrest.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can cause burnout and other serious health problems, which strengthens the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers require basic labor safeguards, such as adequate rest periods, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without these protections, their physical and mental health can deteriorate, resulting in chronic fatigue, workplace injuries, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, regulations that limit maximum working hours and mandate rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have greater control over their schedules and the legal right to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face additional challenges in the same work environment. Although some measures may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive adequate rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is a crucial step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

Would you like me to replace that example with a specific statistic or a cited source?

You:

replace that example with a specific statistic

Assistant:

I can do that — quick question before I insert a number: do you want a global statistic or a statistic for a specific country/region (e.g., Gulf states, EU, USA)? Also, do you already have a source you want me to use, or should I find a reliable source (for example, an ILO or World Bank report) and insert the statistic with a short parenthetical citation?

Choose one:

- A) I have a source — I'll paste the source or the sentence and I'll insert it into the essay.
- B) Find a global statistic and insert it (I'll use a reputable source and add a short citation).
- C) Find a region-specific statistic — tell me which region and I'll find and insert it.

Tell me A, B, or C (and if A or C, paste the source or region). I'll then replace the example sentence with the specific statistic and return the full revised essay.

You:

B

Assistant:

Good choice — I inserted a global statistic from a reputable source (International Labour Organization) into the paragraph about the wage gap. I used a cautious phrasing and a short parenthetical citation so you can check or replace it with a newer source if you prefer.

Below is the full revised essay with the statistic added. After the essay I give a very brief note on the source and a quick next step suggestion.

Revised essay

Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so would prevent exploitation through unfair wages and excessive working hours that damage their health and increase social tension.

The large wage gap between migrant and native workers creates a sense of unfairness that can lead to strikes or protests, underscoring the need for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower pay. Over time, such injustice may provoke collective action that disrupts businesses and public services. For example, a 2017 ILO estimate counts about 164 million international migrant workers worldwide, many of whom face wage disparities or exploitative hours (ILO, 2017). Stricter labor laws would help to address pay disparities and reduce social unrest.

Excessive working hours among migrant workers can cause burnout and other serious health problems, which strengthens the case for stronger legal protections. Migrant workers require basic labor safeguards, such as adequate rest periods, meal breaks, and access to sanitary facilities. Without these protections, their physical and mental health can deteriorate, resulting in chronic fatigue, workplace injuries, or stress-related illnesses. Therefore, regulations that limit maximum working hours and mandate rest periods are necessary to protect workers' health and work-life balance. Workers should also have greater control over their schedules and the legal right to refuse unsafe or excessive shifts.

In conclusion, compared with native-born citizens, migrant employees face additional challenges in the same work environment. Although some measures may aim to protect local workers, governments must still ensure that migrant workers receive adequate rights and protections. Enforcing stricter labor laws is a crucial step toward reducing discrimination and racial bias and promoting social cohesion.

Source note and quick next step

- The inserted fact is based on an ILO estimate (commonly cited figure: ~164 million international migrant workers, 2017). Please verify and update this number if you have a more recent source (for example, an ILO or World Bank report).
- Would you like me to:
  - A) Replace this with a region-specific statistic (e.g., EU, Gulf states, USA) — tell me which region; or
  - B) Provide a full citation (author, report title, year) and a short sentence you can paste into your references?

Tell me A or B (or "neither") and I'll make the change. Great progress — your essay is much stronger now.

You:

i think the writing much better

Assistant:

That's great — I'm glad you feel it's much better. Nice progress!

Before we finish, what would you like to do next? Pick one option (or tell me something different) and I'll continue:

- 1) Revise the conclusion (tighten language, remove repetition, make the final sentence stronger).
- 2) Final proofreading pass (fix any remaining small grammar/word-choice issues, check punctuation and spacing, and produce a clean final version to submit).
- 3) Improve evidence & citations (replace the ILO sentence with a specific regional statistic or add a full reference).
- 4) Targeted practice (I'll give 6 short exercises on your most common errors: articles, collocations, verb tenses, and sentence connectors).
- 5) Get a quick rubric estimate (I'll score the current essay against the course rubric and give a few focused tips to raise each criterion).

Also: if you want, I can send the full polished essay as a single clean text you can copy/paste for submission.

Which option do you choose? A quick reply with the number (1–5) is fine. If you're happy and want no further changes, tell me "Done — submit" and I'll give a short checklist for final submission.

You:

Targeted practice

Assistant:

Great — targeted practice is a smart choice. Below are six short, focused exercises based on the errors you tend to make. Try each one and paste your answers here. I'll check them and give quick feedback with short explanations. Be bold — make an attempt, and I'll help correct anything.

Exercise 1 — Articles (a / an / the / no article)

Instruction: Insert the correct article (a, an, the) or remove an incorrect article. Keep the rest of the sentence the same.

Example: "They were paid less wage." → "They were paid less wage." (student corrects to: "They were paid lower wages.")

Sentences:

1. "Setting a more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling."
2. "They often work longer hours and perform hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages." (Check whether any article is needed.)
3. "This is a big step for reducing the racial bias in the world." (Check article use: keep or change?)

Exercise 2 — Collocations / word choice

Instruction: Replace the underlined awkward phrase with a natural collocation (one or two words).

Example: "work longer time" → "work longer hours"

Sentences:

1. "paid more hardwork and patient" → replace with a natural phrase for doing difficult work and being patient.
2. "show out their anger" → replace with a natural phrase meaning to express anger publicly.
3. "balance their work and life" → is this natural? If not, give the usual collocation.

Exercise 3 — Verb tense and verb forms

Instruction: Change each sentence to the correct present-simple or modal form for general statements.

Example: "They worked longer time." → "They often work longer hours."

Sentences:

1. "In the long term, they may take some action to show out their anger."
2. "If they can't control these basic requirement, their health will be damaged in the long-term."
3. "Enforcing stricter laws are necessary for them to balance their work and life."

Exercise 4 — Subject–verb agreement & plural/singular

Instruction: Fix the verb or noun so subject and verb agree, and plural/singular forms are correct.

Example: "a more protective laws" → "more protective laws" or "a more protective law"

Sentences:

1. "Setting a more protective laws to migrants..."
2. "Some of the limitations can protect the local workers but we still need to give enough rights..." (Check noun form: "rights" vs "right"?)
3. "This is the way to protect the local workers in the workplace." (Is this phrasing natural? Try a clearer version.)

Exercise 5 — Prepositions & small function words

Instruction: Choose the correct preposition or small word to make the phrase natural.

Example: "compare to" → "compared with" or "compared to"

Sentences:

1. "comparing to the native-born citizens" → correct this phrase.
2. "decide the options by themselves" → is "decide the options" natural? Try a more natural preposition/verb.
3. "damaged in the long-term" → correct the small word and spelling.

Exercise 6 — Connectors and cohesion (combine and improve)

Instruction: Combine the two simple sentences into one clear, academic sentence using a connector (because / which / therefore / as a result).

Example: "They often work longer hours. They receive lower wages." → "Because they often work longer hours, they receive lower wages." (or another logical connection)

Pairs to combine:

1. "The large wage gap creates a sense of unfairness. This may lead to protests or strikes."
2. "Migrant workers need rest and meal breaks. Without these, their health can suffer."
3. "Some measures protect local workers. Governments must still ensure migrant workers receive rights." (Use a connector that shows contrast or concession.)

When you finish, paste your answers (just the corrected lines is fine). I'll check each one, give brief corrections, and explain why — quick and helpful feedback so you learn the pattern and avoid these errors next time. Nice work — you're improving already!

You:

"Setting more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling."
"They often work longer hours and perform the hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages."

Assistant:

Well done — nice attempts. Quick feedback and corrected versions with short explanations.

1) Your sentence: Setting more protective laws to migrants can ease the negative feeling.

Suggested correction: Introducing more protective laws for migrant workers can reduce this sense of injustice.

Why:

- "Setting" is possible but a more natural verb is "introducing," "enacting," or "implementing."
- Use "for migrant workers" (not "to migrants").
- "the negative feeling" is vague; "this sense of injustice" or "this sense of unfairness" is clearer and more academic.
- "reduce" fits better than "ease" in this policy context.

2) Your sentence: They often work longer hours and perform the hard physical work, yet they receive lower wages.

Suggested correction: They often work longer hours and perform physically demanding labor, yet they receive lower wages.

Why:

- Remove the definite article "the" before "hard physical work."
- "Physically demanding labor" is a natural collocation and more formal than "hard physical work."
- The rest is fine; you could also say "yet still receive lower wages" for emphasis.

Would you like to continue with the rest of the exercises? Paste your answers for Exercises 1–6 (or tell me which exercise you want help with next) and I'll give quick corrections and short explanations. Keep going — you're improving!