Contribution Analysis

Your revision is excellent—clear, grammatically correct, and coherent. I especially like the small additions in option 2 that specify "labor laws" and use the possessive form "migrant workers' rights" to clarify meaning.

Option 2 is a good choice:

"Nowadays, the issues faced by migrant workers are increasingly in the spotlight. Public attention is focused on whether governments should enforce stricter labor laws to safeguard migrant workers' rights."

If you agree, I'll keep this wording in your essay.

Next, you can choose how to continue:

1. Focus on polishing grammar and vocabulary in the revised second body paragraph first (one sentence at a time, for focused feedback), or

2. Extend the editing now to include other weak or awkward sentences in the introduction and conclusion (you can paste any sentences you want help with), and I will help revise them stepwise.

Which would you like to do?

Tasks check: All three tasks completed — the student revised the thesis statement, revised a topic sentence, and revised a body paragraph.

STUDENT ASSESSMENT REPORT

Course: LANG 0036 - Enhancing English through Global Citizenship

Module: AI for Revising Essays

ESSAY WRITING ASSESSMENT

Original Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 18/25 - The original presents a clear position (government should act for migrant workers) but ideas are underdeveloped and repetitive. Example: original thesis phrasing, "I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them," is vague and does not preview reasons.

- Organization: 17/25 - Attempts paragraphing and signals ("Firstly, Secondly") but paragraphs lack clear topic sentences and logical progression; many sentence fragments interrupt flow.

- Vocabulary: 15/25 - Some appropriate word choices, but many limited/incorrect forms and misspellings (e.g., "Nowaday," "spoltlight," "teo") reduce precision and register.

- Grammar: 14/25 - Frequent grammatical and spelling errors that impair clarity (e.g., fragmentary sentences, agreement errors).

- Original Essay Total: 64/100

Revised Essay Scores:

(Using the submitted Revised Essay) - Content and Ideas: 21/25 - Thesis is clear and specific: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers." The essay develops two reasons and addresses a counterargument. Could be strengthened with sourced evidence and more detail about policy mechanisms. - Organization: 22/25 - The revised essay has a clear structure (intro, reasons, counterargument, conclusion) and logical progression between claims and evidence. - Vocabulary: 21/25 - Improved precision and topic vocabulary (e.g., "exploitation," "wage undercutting," "legal protection"). Minor room to vary academic register and incorporate discipline-specific terms. - Grammar: 22/25 - Sentences are mostly accurate with varied structures; minor edits could increase stylistic tightness. - Revised Essay Total: 86/100

Essay Improvement Analysis:

- Overall Improvement: +22 points

- Key Improvements Made:

- Thesis clarity and specificity: revised from "I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them." to a clear policy claim: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers."

- Stronger topic sentence and paragraph focus: e.g., student revised the second-paragraph topic sentence to: "One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe economic exploitation, such as being paid wages far below the cost of living."

- Improved evidence handling: the H&M example was reworded responsibly to avoid an unverified precise figure: "For example, a garment sold by a brand like H&M for $80 may generate only a few cents in wages for the worker who made it," and followed by a linking sentence explaining the policy implication.

- Missed Opportunities:

- Evidence and sourcing: the essay uses a useful illustrative example (H&M) but would be stronger with citations or more precise source-based data to support the claims.

- Policy specifics and mechanisms: the essay could improve by explaining what specific legal measures (minimum wage enforcement, inspections, penalties, supply-chain regulation) would look like and how they would be enforced.

- First body paragraph (competition/undercutting) in the chat-integrated draft still contained awkward phrasing and could be tightened further for clarity and evidence.

HUMAN-AI INTERACTION ASSESSMENT

Chat History Analysis:

- Total Exchanges: 18 (assistant and student messages in the provided chat log)

- Conversation Quality: High quality. The assistant proposed a clear stepwise revision plan (thesis → topic sentence → paragraph) and the student followed it, producing multiple iterations and explicit rewrites. The student asked clarifying questions (e.g., whether the draft matched the course prompt) and accepted, refined, or asked to tighten suggestions. Evidence: the assistant's plan message and the student's successive thesis/topic-sentence/supporting-sentence submissions and requests to tighten the thesis and introduction.

Interaction Scores:

- In-Depth Conversation: 5/5 - The chat shows an extensive, multi-step interaction (about 18 messages) with iterative guidance and student follow-through. The assistant guided revision sequencing and the student engaged at each stage.

- Evidence: the assistant outlined a 3-step revision process and the student executed each step (thesis revision, topic sentence revision, supporting-sentence revision), including additional tightening of thesis and intro.

- Critical Review of AI Suggestions: 4/5 - The student critically engaged with most suggestions, produced independent rewrites, and asked for refinements (e.g., tightened thesis wording and improved the intro). The student did not always provide extended evidence-based justifications for accepting or rejecting every minor suggestion, but choices were reasoned and iterative.

- Evidence: student rewrote the thesis multiple times after assistant guidance and asked for a final tightening: "I'd like to tighten the thesis wording now..." Student also chose cautious wording for the H&M example instead of accepting a precise unverified figure.

- Refining Process: 5/5 - Clear multiple meaningful revision cycles occurred. The student revised the thesis, revised the topic sentence, revised supporting sentences, then asked for an intro refinement and accepted assistant suggestions.

Evidence: iterative messages show stepwise submission and assistant feedback: student posted revised thesis → assistant feedback → student revised again → topic sentence and paragraph rewrites, then intro edits.

Human-AI Interaction Total: 14/15

OVERALL PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Strengths Demonstrated:

- Clear engagement and ownership of revisions — the student repeatedly produced new drafts rather than asking the assistant to rewrite everything (e.g., student-proposed thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws..." and topic sentence: "One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe economic exploitation...").

- Effective iterative collaboration — followed structured three-step plan and completed the scope (thesis, topic sentence, paragraph); then extended to intro edits.

- Responsible evidence use — the student avoided repeating an unverified exact wage and rewrote the H&M example cautiously: "may generate only a few cents," and added a linking sentence clarifying the policy implication.

Areas for Improvement:

- Source-based evidence: add citations or specific studies/statistics to strengthen claims (e.g., NGO reports, labor studies) and avoid over-reliance on single illustrative examples.

- Policy specificity: explain what "stricter labor laws" would include (minimum wages, enforcement mechanisms, supply-chain liabilities) and how they would be implemented to make the argument more persuasive.

- Continued grammar/phrase polishing: although the final revised essay is strong, some earlier draft sentences (and the chat-integrated full draft) still showed non-native errors and awkward phrasing; continue attention to sentence-level edits.

AI Collaboration Skills Assessment:

- Context Provision: Good — the student provided the full essay and confirmed revision targets. Evidence: the student pasted the original essay and selected targets ("I agree... focus on: (1) thesis (2) second body paragraph").

- Strategic Planning: Good — the student accepted and followed a plan (thesis → topic sentence → paragraph → intro edits). Evidence: agreed plan in chat and execution across multiple messages.

- Critical Evaluation: Good — student evaluated suggestions, made own rewrites, and asked for refinements (e.g., tightening thesis). Evidence: student chose phrasing for H&M example and asked for thesis tightening.

- Independent Editing: Good — the student performed multiple self-rewrites before accepting assistant edits. Evidence: successive submitted drafts of thesis and topic sentences.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

1. Add credible sources: incorporate NGO reports, academic studies, or reputable journalism to support the H&M example and the broader claims (add parenthetical citations or footnotes as appropriate).

2. Expand policy detail: when arguing for "stricter labor laws," specify examples (minimum wage floors, mandatory inspections, corporate penalties, transparency in supply chains) and briefly explain how these would operate and be enforced.

3. Maintain sentence-level editing discipline: continue iterative proofreading for subject–verb agreement, article use, and idiomatic phrasing; consider a final pass focused only on grammar and register before submission.

INSTRUCTOR NOTES

- The student completed the assigned revision tasks and demonstrated strong, structured use of the AI assistant: they revised the thesis, a topic sentence, and a body paragraph; then extended the work to refine the introduction.

- The student actively engaged in critical choices (avoiding an unverified exact wage figure, requesting tighter thesis wording).

- Suggest assigning a follow-up task to add at least one cited source and to refine the first body paragraph's language and evidence for full assignment readiness.

- Minor concern: the assistant correctly asked whether the student had the right prompt (climate change vs migrant workers). The student confirmed the migrant-workers topic; instructors should ensure topic alignment with course prompts when grading.

Nowaday migrant workers facing a lot of issues is taken in the spoltlight. People are following the governments action, is it to enforce the stricter laws to safeguard their rights.
I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them. There are few reasons why I think so.
Firstly, for ensure native-born workers get the work comparing with migrant workers. The reason why native-born employee is more hard to find job recently. Because the price of hiring local worker is more teo time than migrant workers if governments still doing nothing.
Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated. They are getting the weak regulations. The situation is that what they earn might not ensure is it enough to live in a high cost countries. And they need to work for a long hours aand receive unfair pay. Just give an example, H&M one clothes sell around $80, but the worker might only receive $0.5. It is totally unfair. And there already had a lot of NGO to point out the problem. However some people think government should not take any action to stop it because it would decrease the number of migrant workers rush into their countries. But the fact is although they are facing exploitation, there is still a huge number of migrant workers. And if we don't stop their unfair pay, you cannot give me one reason why company do not choose to pay lower to hire them.
All in all, in here I urge government to enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights and protect the native-born workers. We should take action, instead of hiding and pretend to see nothing.

Revised:
Nowadays, the challenges faced by migrant workers have been brought into the spotlight. Public attention is focused on government action, specifically whether stricter laws should be enforced to safeguard their rights. I firmly believe that governments must act. Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers.

The first reason for this intervention is to protect native-born workers. Currently, these workers often struggle to find employment because companies can hire migrant labor for significantly lower wages—sometimes less than half the cost of a local employee. If governments fail to regulate this imbalance, they effectively incentivize the replacement of local workers with underpaid migrants, undermining the domestic labor market.

Furthermore, migrant workers are routinely subjected to severe exploitation. One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe exploitation, including unfair pay and excessive hours, which demonstrates the urgent need for legal protection. They often work under weak regulations, earning wages insufficient for survival in high-cost countries while working excessively long hours. For example, a garment sold by a brand like H&M for $80 may generate only a few cents in wages for the worker who made it. This vast disparity shows that without laws enforcing fair wages, corporations have no incentive to pay migrant workers a livable income. Numerous NGOs have documented this systemic injustice.

Some argue that stricter laws would deter migrant workers from entering a country. However, evidence shows that exploitation does not stop migration flows, which are driven by deeper economic necessity. The real consequence of inaction is a race to the bottom: if companies face no legal requirement to pay fair wages, they will always opt for the cheapest labor, perpetuating a cycle of poverty that hurts all workers.

In conclusion, I urge governments to enforce stricter labor laws. This is essential to safeguard the rights of vulnerable migrant workers and to protect the economic interests of native-born citizens. We must choose to act justly, rather than passively allowing this exploitation to continue.

Hi there! ■ I'm your English writing coach, here to help you strengthen your essay through clear, focused revision. Before we dive in, we'll take a moment to set some goals together.

Here's how our session will work:

Negotiate your targets — We'll start by discussing what you want to improve most in your essay.
Get a quick diagnosis — I'll give you feedback on your essay based on key writing rubrics (like thesis, organization, evidence, and language).
Choose what to focus on — You'll decide which issues you'd like to work on first.
Then we'll move through a structured, three-step revision process:

Step 1: Revise your thesis statement.
Step 2: Choose one body paragraph and refine its topic sentence.
Step 3: Revise the rest of that paragraph for clarity and coherence.
My role is to guide you with questions, feedback, and examples—but you'll always lead the revisions yourself. ■

You:

Here is my essay. Please provide a quick diagnosis so we can choose what to focus on.Nowaday migrant workers facing a lot of issues is taken in the spoltlight. People are following the governments action, is it to enforce the stricter laws to safeguard their rights.

Assistant:

Great — thanks for sharing your essay. Before we begin revising, let's negotiate targets and do a quick diagnosis so you can pick what to focus on.

1) Quick question about your goals
- Which of these do you most want to improve today? (Pick up to two.)
a) Clarity and strength of your thesis/argument
b) Organization and logical flow (topic sentences, paragraph structure)
c) Evidence and development (use of examples and explanation)
d) Vocabulary and grammar (sentence accuracy, word choice)

Tell me which you choose. If you're not sure, I recommend focusing first on (a) thesis clarity and (b) one body paragraph (b and c), because a clearer thesis will help the rest of the essay, and one paragraph is the scope we'll revise together.

2) Brief diagnostic feedback (using the rubric categories)
- Content & Ideas
Strengths: You have a clear viewpoint — you believe the government should act to protect migrant workers. You include an example (H&M) which is useful.
Areas to improve: The main argument is underdeveloped and repetitive. Reasons are vague and need clearer explanation and logic.

> Organisation & Logical Progression
> Strengths: The essay uses paragraphs and attempts signalling (Firstly, Secondly, All in all).
> Areas to improve: Paragraphs lack clear topic sentences that tie to a strong thesis. Transitions are weak and ideas jump around.

> Evidence & Development
> Strengths: You attempt to give a concrete example (H&M wages).
> Areas to improve: Evidence is presented without enough explanation or sources; numbers need clarification. Claims need clearer links to your argument (how government action would solve the problem).

> Vocabulary & Grammar
> Strengths: You use some academic phrasing.
> Areas to improve: Frequent errors in grammar, sentence structure, word choice and spelling (e.g., Nowaday, spoltlight, teo, aand). These errors sometimes make meaning unclear.

Estimated rubric-level overall: Developing (3) — your ideas are relevant and you have a viewpoint, but clarity, organization, and language need improvement to reach Proficient.

3) My recommendation (but you choose)
- I suggest we focus on:
1) Revising the thesis so it clearly answers the question and previews main points.
2) Revising one body paragraph — I recommend the second paragraph (the paragraph about unfair treatment and the H&M example) because it has concrete evidence that we can clarify and connect to the thesis.

Do you agree with that plan? If yes:
- Confirm that you want to focus on (1) thesis and (2) the second body paragraph.
- Tell me whether the sentence "I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them." is the thesis you want to revise, or paste the exact thesis you want to keep.
- Paste the topic sentence of the body paragraph you want to work on (or tell me which paragraph: the one beginning "Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated.").

Once you confirm, we'll begin Step 1 (thesis revision). I'll give feedback and ask you to try a rewrite first. Would you like to proceed with this plan?

You:

I agree with your plan. I want to focus on:

(1) Clarity and strength of my thesis/argument.

(2) Revising the second body paragraph (about unfair treatment and the H&M example).

Yes, the sentence I intend as my thesis is: "I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them."

The paragraph I want to work on begins with: "Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated."

Assistant:

Thanks — this is a good start and I'm glad you picked clear targets. One important issue before we begin revising the thesis:

Quick check about the prompt

- The assignment prompt asks about climate change (individual actions vs governments/corporations). Your essay is about migrant workers and government labor laws. Did you mean to write about migrant workers instead of climate change, or did you paste the wrong draft? Which topic do you want to work on today: the climate-change prompt or the migrant-worker topic?

Step 1 — Feedback on your current thesis

You told me your thesis is: "I deeply believed that governments should take action to protect them."

Problems to fix now

- It does not answer the assigned question (it talks about migrant workers rather than climate change).
- It is vague: "them" is unclear (who?), and "take action" is unspecific.
- Grammar/tense: "I deeply believed" is past and hedged; use present, confident language.
- It doesn't preview the main reasons/structure of the essay.

What a strong thesis should do here

- Directly answer the essay question you're writing on.
- State your position clearly and confidently (no "I think," no past-tense hedging).
- Preview 2–3 main reasons or the structure you will develop in the body paragraphs.

Before I give examples, tell me which topic you want to keep (climate change prompt or migrant workers). If you're unsure, I recommend focusing on the migrant-worker topic since your draft already has evidence (H&M) you can develop.

Try rewriting your thesis now

- Please try one short sentence that: (1) states your position clearly, and (2) previews two main reasons you will explain.
- Use one of these sentence frames to help you — pick the frame that matches your topic.

If you want to keep the climate-change prompt:

- "I [agree/disagree/partly disagree] that individual actions are insignificant because [reason 1], [reason 2], and [reason 3]."

If you want to keep the migrant-worker topic:

- "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because [reason 1], [reason 2], and [reason 3]."

Hint about reasons (choose two or three to preview)

- For climate: influence consumer demand/corporate behavior; create political pressure for policy; reduce emissions directly.
- For migrant workers: prevent exploitation and low pay; ensure fair competition and protect native workers; hold corporations accountable and improve living standards.

Would you like to try rewriting your thesis now using one of those frames? I'll give quick feedback and then we'll move to the paragraph you chose.

You:

My new thesis:
"Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so prevents exploitation and ensures fair competition for native-born workers."

Next Step:
I am ready for your feedback on this revised thesis. After that, I would like to move to Step 2 and revise the second body paragraph, which begins with: "Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated."

Assistant:

Great—nice work on the revised thesis. Let's go step by step.

Quick feedback on your revised thesis
Your thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so prevents exploitation and ensures fair competition for native-born workers."

What's good
- It is clear and direct. Good: present-tense, confident wording.
- It answers the question for the migrant-worker topic.
- It previews two reasons you can develop: preventing exploitation and protecting native workers.

Small improvements to consider (pick one or two)
- Replace the weak phrase "doing so" with a more specific verb phrase (so the sentence is stronger).
- Make the second reason more precise: "ensures fair competition for native-born workers" could be clarified as "prevents wage undercutting and unfair competition" or "protects local employment by reducing wage undercutting."
- Consider one tighter phrasing using active language (but I won't rewrite it for you unless you ask).

Would you like to refine the thesis now? If yes, try one short revision using this frame:
- "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers by [preventing X] and [ensuring Y]."
Type your revision when you're ready. If you're satisfied with your current thesis, say "Satisfied" and we'll move on.

I'll assume you want to move to Step 2 once you confirm. Below I've inserted your current thesis into your full essay (so you have one complete version with your latest change). Because you made a specific edit, I include the full text here.

Full essay with your revised thesis inserted

Nowaday migrant workers facing a lot of issues is taken in the spoltlight. People are following the governments action, is it to enforce the stricter laws to safeguard their rights.
Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so prevents exploitation and ensures fair competition for native-born workers.
There are few reasons why I think so.
Firstly, for ensure native-born workers get the work comparing with migrant workers. The reason why native-born employee is more hard to find job recently. Because the price of hiring local worker is more teo time than migrant workers if governments still doing nothing.
Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated. They are getting the weak regulations. The situation is that what they earn might not ensure is it enough to live in a high cost countries. And they need to work for a long hours aand receive unfair pay. Just give an example, H&M one clothes sell around $80, but the worker might only receive $0.5. It is totally unfair. And there already had a lot of NGO to point out the problem. However some people think government should not take any action to stop it because it would decrease the number of migrant workers rush into their countries. But the fact is although they are facing exploitation, there is still a huge number of migrant workers. And if we don't stop their unfair pay, you cannot give me one reason why company do not choose to pay lower to hire them.

All in all, in here I urge government to enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights and protect the native-born workers. We should take action, instead of hiding and pretend to see nothing.

Step 2 — Topic sentence feedback (for the paragraph beginning "Secondly, I would like to point out how unfair these migrant workers have been treated.")
Quick diagnosis of the current topic sentence
- It signals the paragraph's subject (unfair treatment) but is weak: it is phrased as a personal comment ("I would like to point out") rather than a direct claim.
- It does not clearly connect to the thesis language (preventing exploitation / fair competition). A stronger topic sentence should state the paragraph's main claim and show how it supports the thesis.

What the topic sentence should do
- Make a clear claim that links to one of your thesis reasons (in this paragraph: prevention of exploitation).
- Prepare the reader for the evidence you will give (wages, hours, example of H&M).

Try revising the topic sentence now using one of these frames (pick one and fill the blanks):
- "One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers often face [specific problem], such as [example]."
- "Migrant workers are frequently exploited: they [short list of problems]. Stricter laws would [briefly how law helps]."

Please try rewriting the topic sentence now. I want you to try first—type your new topic sentence in one line. I'll give quick feedback and then we'll revise the supporting sentences.

Guidance for revising the rest of that paragraph (Step 3 preview)
After you improve the topic sentence, we'll work on the supporting sentences. When you post a revision, keep these focus points in mind:
- Make the evidence clearer: the H&M example is useful but the numbers are unclear and may be inaccurate. If you don't have an exact number, say "a very small share of the retail price" or "a few cents per garment" rather than a precise $0.5 unless you can verify it.
- Explain the link: after each fact, add one sentence that explains how that fact shows exploitation and how stricter laws would change it (e.g., enforcement of minimum wages, inspections, penalties).
- Fix grammar and spelling: short sentences are okay, but check subject-verb agreement and word forms (e.g., "Nowadays," "are taken," "in the spotlight," "two times," "long hours," "NGOs," "there have already been").

A focused revision task for you
- Revise the topic sentence now.
- Then choose one supporting sentence from the paragraph (e.g., the sentence with the H&M example or the sentence about long hours/unfair pay) and try to rewrite it more clearly and connect it to the topic sentence.

When you post those two revised sentences, I'll give targeted feedback and then produce the full essay text again with only the changes you make.

Would you like to try rewriting the topic sentence now?

You:

I will refine my thesis based on your suggestions.

My Revised Thesis:
"Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers by preventing their exploitation and ensuring fair competition for native-born workers."

I am satisfied with this version and ready to move to Step 2.

Step 2 — Revised Topic Sentence for the Second Paragraph:

My New Topic Sentence:
"One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe economic exploitation, such as being paid wages far below the cost of living."

Next Step:
I am ready for your feedback on this topic sentence. After that, I will revise one supporting sentence from the paragraph as you suggested.

Assistant:

Nice work — this topic sentence is a big improvement: it's clear, focused, and directly connects to your thesis idea about exploitation.

Quick, specific feedback to make it even stronger
- Content: "severe economic exploitation" is a strong claim. You could briefly preview the kinds of exploitation you will show (low wages, long hours, unsafe conditions) so the reader knows what to expect.
- Thesis link: make the connection explicit in the paragraph (not necessarily in this one sentence) by showing how these facts point to the need for stricter laws.
- Economy of language: the sentence is fine, but you can tighten it slightly by removing extra words (keep it direct and forceful).

Helpful sentence frames you can use (fill the blanks — don't copy verbatim unless you want to)
- "One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe exploitation, including _ and , which demonstrates __."
- "Migrant workers are often paid extremely low wages and work long hours; for example, _, which shows why stricter laws are needed to ___."

Now choose one supporting sentence to revise
- I recommend revising the H&M example sentence, because it's concrete but currently unclear and possibly inaccurate. Paste the original supporting sentence you'll revise (or type your new version) and I'll give targeted feedback.

Quick guidance for that revision
- If you don't have a verified number, avoid an exact figure (like $0.5). Use phrases such as "a tiny share of the retail price," "only a few cents per garment," or "a very small wage compared with the retail price."
- After the fact/example, add one short sentence explaining the connection: how that wage level shows exploitation and how stricter laws (minimum wage, inspections, penalties) would help.
- Check grammar: present tense, subject-verb agreement ("workers are paid," not "they are getting"), plurals ("NGOs," "workers"), and small spelling fixes ("Nowadays," "two times," "long hours").

Would you like to try revising the H&M sentence now? Paste your revised sentence and I'll respond with quick feedback and then we'll update the full paragraph.

You:

"One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe exploitation, including unfair pay and excessive hours, which demonstrates the urgent need for legal protection."

Step 3 — Revised Supporting Sentence (H&M Example):

Original Sentence: "Just give an example, H&M one clothes sell around $80, but the worker might only receive $0.5."

My Revised Version: "For example, a garment sold by a brand like H&M for $80 may generate only a few cents in wages for the worker who made it."

Connection Sentence (Explaining the Link): "This vast disparity shows that without laws enforcing fair wages, corporations have no incentive to pay migrant workers a livable income."

Assistant:

Great work — you made strong, focused revisions to the topic sentence and supporting sentences. First, quick confirmation before I show the updated essay:

- Targets we agreed on: (a) thesis clarity and (b) revising the second body paragraph (topic sentence + supporting sentences). Confirmed.

- You wrote a clearer thesis earlier and then produced a strong topic sentence plus a revised H&M example and connection sentence. Nice.

Quick feedback on what you wrote
- Topic sentence: Very good — clear, forceful, and directly linked to your thesis. It previews the kinds of exploitation you will discuss.
- H&M sentence: Well done — you avoided an exact unverified number and made the example clearer and more responsible.
- Connection sentence: Strong and direct; it explains why the example matters and links back to the need for laws.

Small suggestions (optional)
- In the thesis, consider replacing "doing so" with a more specific phrase (e.g., "because stricter laws would prevent exploitation and stop wage undercutting") — ask me to help if you want that tightened.
- When you use examples like H&M, think about adding "research shows" or "NGOs report" if you can find a source; otherwise "a few cents" is fine as a cautious phrasing.

Because you made specific edits, here is the full essay with your revised thesis and your revised second paragraph integrated. I kept all other parts of the essay as they were (we are working only on the thesis and that one paragraph):

Nowaday migrant workers facing a lot of issues is taken in the spoltlight. People are following the governments action, is it to enforce the stricter laws to safeguard their rights.
Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so prevents exploitation and ensures fair competition for native-born workers.
There are few reasons why I think so.
Firstly, for ensure native-born workers get the work comparing with migrant workers. The reason why native-born employee is more hard to find job recently. Because the price of hiring local worker is more teo time than migrant workers if governments still doing nothing.
One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe exploitation, including unfair pay and excessive hours, which demonstrates the urgent need for legal protection. They face weak legal protections. Their wages are often not enough to live in high-cost countries, and they often work long hours and receive unfair pay. For example, a garment sold by a brand like H&M for $80 may generate only a few cents in wages for the worker who made it. This vast disparity shows that without laws enforcing fair wages, corporations have no incentive to pay migrant workers a livable income. Many NGOs have already pointed out this problem. However, some people argue that government action would reduce the number of migrant workers entering their countries. But in reality, despite exploitation, a large number of migrant workers continue to seek work abroad. If unfair pay continues, companies will have no reason not to choose cheaper migrant labor, and local workers will continue to be undercut.
All in all, in here I urge government to enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights and protect the native-born workers. We should take action, instead of hiding and pretend to see nothing.

Next steps — pick one:
- If you want, I can help tighten your thesis wording now (replace "doing so" with stronger language). Try a one-line revision and I'll give quick feedback.
- Or we can work on cleaning up grammar and vocabulary in the rest of the essay (short sentences, common errors like "Nowaday," "spoltlight," "teo," "aand," plural/singular forms). I recommend doing that after you are satisfied with thesis + paragraph content.

Would you like to:
1) Refine the thesis now, or
2) Move to editing grammar/vocabulary in the essay?
Pick one and we'll continue — you're doing well.

You:

I'd like to tighten the thesis wording now, as you suggested.

Current Thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because doing so prevents exploitation and ensures fair competition for native-born workers."

My Revised Version: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers."

. Next Step Choice:
After this, I choose to move to editing grammar/vocabulary in the essay. I want to fix the errors in the introduction, first paragraph, and conclusion to make the entire piece clearer.

Ready for your feedback on my revised thesis, and then to proceed with grammar/vocabulary editing.

Assistant:

Nice work — your revised thesis is much stronger: clear, confident, and specific about the reasons. Good job.

Quick feedback on the wording you wrote
- Your thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers."
- What's good: direct present-tense, specific (previews prevention of exploitation and wage undercutting), and ties both groups together.
- Optional tiny tweak (only if you want it): you could replace "stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers" with "prevent wage undercutting that harms native-born workers" for parallel structure with "prevent exploitation." But your version is already strong.

Are you satisfied with this thesis? If yes, we'll move on. (If you want that tiny tweak, tell me and I'll apply it.)

Because you changed the thesis, here is your full essay with your latest thesis inserted (I only changed the thesis; the rest of the text is the same as we agreed earlier):

Next: grammar and vocabulary editing

Remember our agreed scope for this session: we will revise the thesis (done) and work on one body paragraph's topic sentence and that paragraph's content (we already revised that paragraph earlier). Because of that scope, I can now help you focus grammar/vocabulary improvements on the paragraph we revised (the second body paragraph). If you would rather edit the introduction and conclusion too, we can plan a follow-up session — or you can paste one sentence from those sections now and we'll work on it one at a time.

Please choose one:

1) Continue within scope — work on grammar and vocabulary in the revised second paragraph (pick one sentence from that paragraph you want to fix; try revising it first, paste your attempt, and I'll give feedback), or

2) Extend now — ask me to help with a specific sentence from the introduction or conclusion (paste that sentence), and I'll give focused corrections and suggestions (we'll keep to one or two sentences so we stay interactive).

A few quick grammar/vocabulary hints you can use right away when you revise:

- Use "Nowadays" (not "Nowaday"). Use "is in the spotlight" or "is being highlighted" rather than "is taken in the spotlight."
- Watch subject–verb agreement: "migrant workers face" (not "facing" alone without a verb), "people are following the government's actions" (possessive and plural).
- Avoid short, fragmented sentences; combine related ideas with conjunctions or relative clauses.
- Fix common spellings: two (not "teo"), and (not "aand"), NGOs (plural and capitalized), "native-born workers" (hyphen).
- Use plural/singular consistently: "a high-cost country" (singular) or "high-cost countries" (plural) but match article/verb.

Which option will you pick (1 or 2)? If you pick 1, please paste one supporting sentence from the revised second paragraph you want to edit (or try a rewrite and paste it). If you pick 2, paste the exact sentence from the intro or conclusion you want to revise. I'll respond with short, focused feedback and a suggested correction if you need it.

You:

Extend now to the introduction. Let's fix the first two problematic sentences, as they are crucial for making a good first impression.

Please help me revise

"Nowaday migrant workers facing a lot of issues is taken in the spoltlight."
"People are following the governments action, is it to enforce the stricter laws to safeguard their rights."
I'll attempt a revision first for your feedback
My Attempt: "Nowadays, the issues faced by migrant workers are in the spotlight. Public attention is focused on whether governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights."

Ready for your focused feedback on this attempt.

Assistant:

Nice revision — this is much clearer and grammatically correct. Quick feedback and one small suggestion:

Good: You corrected spelling and word order, and the second sentence now clearly shows the issue under debate.

Tiny improvement: add the word "labor" and use the possessive form for clarity: "migrant workers' rights." Also "increasingly" can make the first sentence feel current (optional).

Here are two short options you can choose from (or keep your version):
1) Your version (good): "Nowadays, the issues faced by migrant workers are in the spotlight. Public attention is focused on whether governments should enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights."
2) Slightly tightened (my suggestion): "Nowadays, the issues faced by migrant workers are increasingly in the spotlight. Public attention is focused on whether governments should enforce stricter labor laws to safeguard migrant workers' rights."

Tell me which you prefer (1 or 2), or say "Keep mine" and I'll use your exact sentences. Below I've inserted option 2 into your full essay so you can see how it reads. I only changed the first two sentences and left the rest as we agreed earlier.

Full essay with option 2 inserted

Nowadays, the issues faced by migrant workers are increasingly in the spotlight. Public attention is focused on whether governments should enforce stricter labor laws to safeguard migrant workers' rights.
Governments should enforce stricter labor laws to protect migrant workers because such legislation would prevent exploitation and stop the wage undercutting that harms native-born workers.
There are few reasons why I think so.
Firstly, for ensure native-born workers get the work comparing with migrant workers. The reason why native-born employee is more hard to find job recently. Because the price of hiring local worker is more teo time than migrant workers if governments still doing nothing.
One major reason governments must act is that migrant workers frequently face severe exploitation, including unfair pay and excessive hours, which demonstrates the urgent need for legal protection. They face weak legal protections. Their wages are often not enough to live in high-cost countries, and they often work long hours and receive unfair pay. For example, a garment sold by a brand like H&M for $80 may generate only a few cents in wages for the worker who made it. This vast disparity shows that without laws enforcing fair wages, corporations have no incentive to pay migrant workers a livable income. Many NGOs have already pointed out this problem. However, some people argue that government action would reduce the number of migrant workers entering their countries. But in reality, despite exploitation, a large number of migrant workers continue to seek work abroad. If unfair pay continues, companies will have no reason not to choose cheaper migrant labor, and local workers will continue to be undercut.
All in all, in here I urge government to enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights and protect the native-born workers. We should take action, instead of hiding and pretend to see nothing.

Would you like me to:
- Keep this change and then work on grammar/vocabulary in the revised paragraph (one sentence at a time), or
- Make the same small edits but also fix other weak sentences in the introduction and conclusion now?

Which do you prefer?
