STUDENT ASSESSMENT REPORT

Course: LANG 0036 - Enhancing English through Global Citizenship

Module: AI for Revising Essays

ESSAY WRITING ASSESSMENT

Original Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 19/25 – The essay presents a clear argument about stricter laws for migrant workers and attempts some development. However, reasoning and examples are basic; social and economic implications are touched upon but could be deepened.

- Organization: 17/25 – The structure is recognizable: introduction, main arguments, and conclusion. Paragraphing is sometimes weak; transitions between ideas are simple, some repetition is present.

- Vocabulary: 17/25 – Vocabulary is adequate, with some domain-specific terms (e.g., "migrant workers," "exploitation"), but limited variety and occasional imprecise wording ("factory tools," "illegal organ trafficking" mentioned abruptly).

- Grammar: 17/25 – Mostly correct simple sentences, but several run-ons, comma splices, and non-academic expressions ("my answer is yes," "It's related to all of us") detract from clarity.

- Original Essay Total: 70/100

Revised Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 24/25 – The revision provides a thoroughly developed argument: each reason is explained, human rights and societal security are analyzed, and economic impact is explicitly addressed. Relevance and awareness are clear throughout.

- Organization: 24/25 – Strong introduction with previewing thesis; clear topic sentences in each paragraph; logical progression from point to point; effective conclusion that echoes thesis.

- Vocabulary: 23/25 – Lexis is precise and academic ("inadequate regulations," "governed by the rule of law," "prosperity of society"), and topic-specificity is strong. Minor repetition ("stricter laws") but otherwise varied.

- Grammar: 23/25 – Sentences are well-structured; increased complexity with "although," "when," and "by protecting"; few if any errors; academic tone maintained throughout.

- Revised Essay Total: 94/100

Essay Improvement Analysis:

- Overall Improvement: +24 points

- Key Improvements Made:

- Thesis explicitly previews four main arguments, increasing clarity and argumentative strength.

- Topic sentences for each paragraph link directly to the thesis and forecast content.

- Supporting sentences provide more explanation, create cause-effect relationships, and use academic transitions ("in a society governed by the rule of law…").

- Vocabulary variety and precision improved markedly.

- Grammar, sentence structure, and overall tone upgraded for formality.

- Missed Opportunities:

- Inclusion of real-world examples, statistics, or brief case studies would have deepened the argument and provided concrete evidence.

- Occasional repetition of phrases ("stricter laws," "protect migrant workers") could be smoothed for variety.

- Further differentiation between "social welfare" and "economic growth" could enhance depth in the third body paragraph.

HUMAN-AI INTERACTION ASSESSMENT

Chat History Analysis:

- Total Exchanges: 19 meaningful (out of 22 overall)

- Conversation Quality: The student and AI assistant engaged in a sustained, focused dialogue, moving step-by-step through diagnosis, revision, and refinement of several essay elements. The student frequently sought advice, provided input, and requested further improvements with clear intentions. Exchanges often involved collaborative adjustment rather than mere acceptance of suggestions.

Interaction Scores:

- In-Depth Conversation: 4/5 – The student participated actively in all steps: setting goals, revising thesis, reviewing topic sentences (with intent for all, but focused on one for assessment), and revising two body paragraphs. Multiple multi-turn exchanges ensued on each revision. Critical content suggestions were discussed (e.g., which arguments to show, how to phrase main points). The student's questions ("I want to revise every paragraphs' topic sentences," "revise the first body paragraph," "let its words more accurate") show strategic engagement, though most prompts were short rather than probing. For full 5/5, more sustained, multi-layer questioning would be needed.

- Critical Review of AI Suggestions: 4/5 – The student reviewed the AI's feedback, requested adjustments rather than direct acceptance, indicated which arguments should be explicit, and accepted revisions with rationale ("i think your vision is great!" but also asked for more accuracy). Most suggestions were accepted or tweaked; some original contributions (e.g., choice of focus points, which arguments to include) were evident. Highly positive, but critique was more about selection and customization than true rejection or challenge.

- Refining Process: 5/5 – Multiple rounds of revision are evident: thesis statement adjusted stepwise, topic sentences iteratively improved, two different body paragraphs revised after initial sample, and then whole essay refined for accuracy and tone. Revision cycles followed a collaborative loop, with both surface and deeper changes.

- Human-AI Interaction Total: 13/15

OVERALL PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Strengths Demonstrated:

- Clear improvement in argumentative writing—thesis and topic sentences create a coherent backbone for the essay.

- Willingness to engage in stepwise, detailed revision of both paragraph structure and vocabulary/tone.

- Active participation in collaborative process, taking initiative to request revision of not just one, but multiple topic sentences and paragraphs.

- Ability to evaluate and incorporate feedback to achieve a polished, academic final product.

Areas for Improvement:

- Further critical analysis: practice challenging or rejecting AI suggestions with reason ("I chose not to use X because Y").

- Evidence integration: next essays could include data, examples, or scholarly references for stronger support.

- Language sophistication: occasional repetition and phrase variety can be still developed ("stricter laws" used frequently—try synonymous expressions).

AI Collaboration Skills Assessment:

- Context Provision: Excellent – The student clearly articulated essay goals and responded with focus points for thesis and topic sentences (e.g., "■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■").

- Strategic Planning: Good – Systematic approach shown in revising thesis, topic sentences, and multiple paragraphs, but higher-level planning could include outlining, source selection, or argument mapping.

- Critical Evaluation: Good – Suggestions actively reviewed, customized, and selected, but little overt rejection or deep critique.

- Independent Editing: Good – Most editing was guided by AI suggestions, but the student made clear choices regarding which points/ideas to foreground. Would benefit from more independent sentence or paragraph rewriting.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

1. Continue to strengthen argumentative writing with real-world examples, statistics, or references to deepen evidence.

2. Practice overt critical reflection on AI suggestions by stating reasons for acceptance or rejection, and by offering alternative phrasing.

3. Work on sentence and vocabulary variety, aiming for synonym use and more complex structures throughout the essay.

INSTRUCTOR NOTES

- The student has made substantial gains in organization, clarity, and academic tone; evidence of strong engagement with the AI revision process.

- Next steps should focus on integration of concrete evidence and critical review skills.

- Recommend further practice in expressing rationales for writing choices, as required by the course's collaboration objectives. ```

Original:
The migrant workers are common in the modern world. Many people leave their homeland to seek jobs. But there's a problem: many migrant workers face exploitation due to weak regulations, they endure long working hours and unfair pay. So a question arises: should governments enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights? And my answer is yes.
First, migrant workers are human beings too. Even when they first arrive in a new place as guests and cannot receive the same treatment or salaries as locals, they still contribute their labor to the companies they work for. They shouldn't be exploited just because they are not native-born. In this law-based society, human rights should be well safeguarded.
Second, stricter laws are necessary when existing regulations are weak. Migrant workers suffer from exploitation because of loose rules; if the protections for migrant workers remain inadequate, it may lead to more social issues in the region ,such as illegal organ trafficking and other crimes. Thus, this is not just a problem for migrant workers—it's a problem for the entire society. We need stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights, as well as to ensure our society's safety, It's related to all of us.
Moreover, our society needs a workforce to promote economic development, which requires stricter laws to guarantee a region's healthy growth. Migrant workers are not just factory tools or a symbol of "cheap labor". They are part of our economic structure and our society, and their population is growing steadily now. They don't just work here: they live here, pay for goods and services here, and boost the region's GDP here... So safeguarding their rights is equivalent to safeguarding the region's development.
Last but not least, the government should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights—not just for their better lives, but also for our better future.

Revised:
Migrant workers are a common feature of the modern world. Many individuals leave their home countries in search of employment opportunities abroad. However, a serious issue persists: numerous migrant workers endure exploitation as a result of inadequate regulations, facing long working hours and unfair wages. This raises an important question: should governments implement stricter laws to safeguard their rights? Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because this upholds human rights, prevents exploitation, ensures social welfare, and contributes to economic growth.

Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the fundamental human rights of migrant workers. Although migrant workers are often newcomers, they make valuable contributions to their employers and to society as a whole. They should not be subjected to exploitation simply because they are foreign-born; such discrimination is fundamentally a human rights violation. In a society governed by the rule of law, it is imperative to protect the rights of all individuals equally, including those of migrant workers.

Secondly, without stronger legal protections, migrant workers remain vulnerable to exploitation and society is exposed to increased risks. When regulations are weak or poorly enforced, employers may offer inadequate pay and impose excessive and unsafe working hours. These abuses can give rise to wider social problems, including serious crimes such as illegal organ trafficking. Therefore, safeguarding the rights of migrant workers is not only a matter of individual justice, but is also crucial for maintaining safety and stability within society.

In addition, enacting and enforcing stricter labor laws strengthens both the economy and social welfare. Migrant workers form an integral part of the workforce that is essential for economic growth. They are not simply a source of "cheap labor"; rather, they actively participate in the local economy by living, consuming goods and services, and contributing to regional GDP. By protecting their rights, governments support sustainable development and the overall prosperity of society.

In conclusion, it is vital that governments implement and uphold stricter legal protections for migrant workers. Doing so not only improves their quality of life, but also secures a more just, stable, and prosperous future for all.

Assistant:

Hi there! ■ I'm your English writing coach, here to help you strengthen your essay through clear, focused revision. Before we dive in, we'll take a moment to set some goals together.

Here's how our session will work:

Negotiate your targets — We'll start by discussing what you want to improve most in your essay.
Get a quick diagnosis — I'll give you feedback on your essay based on key writing rubrics (like thesis, organization, evidence, and language).
Choose what to focus on — You'll decide which issues you'd like to work on first.
Then we'll move through a structured, three-step revision process:

Step 1: Revise your thesis statement.
Step 2: Choose one body paragraph and refine its topic sentence.
Step 3: Revise the rest of that paragraph for clarity and coherence.
My role is to guide you with questions, feedback, and examples—but you'll always lead the revisions yourself. ■

You:

Please
revise thesis statement

Assistant:

Absolutely! Before we revise your thesis statement, let's quickly review your current one and discuss how you'd like to improve it.

Your current thesis statement:
"So a question arises: should governments enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights? And my answer is yes."

Feedback:
- Clarity: Your thesis clearly states your position (yes, governments should enforce stricter laws for migrant workers' rights).
- Strength: It could be stronger and more specific about "why" or "how strict laws help."
- Focus/Preview: It doesn't yet preview your key arguments or main points.
- Language: It is confident, but the phrasing ("And my answer is yes") can be made more academic and direct.

A stronger thesis should:
- Answer the essay question directly and assertively.
- Preview your main reasons (for example: human rights, societal well-being, and economic development).
- Avoid conversational phrases like "my answer is yes."

Would you like to try revising it now?
Here are two possible ways to start your revision (just ideas!):

> "Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because it upholds human dignity, strengthens society, and supports economic growth."

> "Stricter legal protections for migrant workers are necessary to ensure their human rights, maintain public order, and promote sustained economic development."

Would you like to try writing your own version, or should we adjust one of these together? Let me know!

You:

Let's adjust one of these together

Assistant:

Great choice! Let's adjust one of these thesis statements together so it fits your voice and main points.

Here's the first suggestion again:

> "Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because it upholds human dignity, strengthens society, and supports economic growth."

Let's break it down:

- "Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights" (direct answer to the question)

- "because it upholds human dignity, strengthens society, and supports economic growth." (previews three main reasons/arguments)

Let's personalize it:
- Do you want to emphasize specific problems, like "exploitation" and "unfair treatment," instead of "human dignity"?
- Would you like to list "protecting human rights," "social stability," or "regional prosperity" as your main points?
- Should the tone be more formal or simpler?

Prompt:
Which of these (or your own ideas) would you like your thesis statement to mention?
For example: human rights, stopping exploitation, social well-being, economic benefits, or something else?

Once you share your preferences, I'll help draft our final thesis!

You:

■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■

Assistant:

Excellent! You'd like your thesis statement to highlight four key reasons:

- ■■ (human rights)

- ■■■■ (stopping exploitation)

- ■■■■ (social well-being/welfare)

- ■■■■ (economic benefits)

Let's build your thesis together. Here's a draft that clearly incorporates your ideas:

> "Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because this upholds human rights, prevents exploitation, promotes social welfare, and increases economic benefits."

Review this draft:
- Does it sound clear and confident to you?
- Is there any word or phrase you'd like to adjust (for example, "social welfare" instead of "well-being", "improves" instead of "increases", etc.)?

Would you like to try revising this sentence yourself, or are you happy with this draft?
Let me know your preference! If you'd like, you can suggest a small change, or confirm if this version works for you.

You:

Ok,and let's revise my topic sentence

Assistant:

Great, let's move on to revising your topic sentence!

Step 2 – Topic Sentence Revision

First, please choose one body paragraph you want to focus on.
Here are your options from the essay:

1. Paragraph about human rights and being treated fairly

2. Paragraph about weak regulations, exploitation, and social problems

3. Paragraph about economic development and migrant workers' contribution

Which paragraph would you like to work on? (Just tell me the number or paste the paragraph here!)

For example, let's say you choose the second paragraph (about weak regulations and exploitation):

Original Topic Sentence:
"Second, stricter laws are necessary when existing regulations are weak."

Feedback:
- Connection to thesis: It does link to your thesis ("stricter laws"), but it could connect more clearly to "prevents exploitation" and the impact on society.
- Strength: It's direct, but could be more specific about the consequences of weak laws.
- Clarity: A small adjustment can help preview the paragraph's point (why weak regulations are a problem).

Guiding Question:
Would you like to mention "exploitation" and also highlight the risk to society? For example:
"Stricter laws are needed because weak regulations allow the exploitation of migrant workers and increase social problems."

Would you like to try revising this topic sentence yourself?
Or, if you'd like, we can tweak it together. Let me know your ideas or your own draft!

Once you share your revision, we can check that it matches the thesis and leads clearly into the rest of the paragraph.

You:

I want to revise every paragraphs' topic sentences

Assistant:

Absolutely! It's fantastic that you want to strengthen all your topic sentences—this will really help your essay's organization and argument.

Let's review and revise each topic sentence, one by one, to make sure they:
- Clearly connect to your thesis statement (human rights, preventing exploitation, social welfare, economic benefits)
- Are direct, specific, and academic in tone
- Preview what each paragraph will focus on

Here's how we'll do it:
1. I'll show you each current topic sentence, with friendly suggestions for improvement
2. You'll try your own revision, or tell me your preferences—I'll guide and encourage along the way!

Paragraph 1: HUMAN RIGHTS

Current topic sentence:

> "First, migrant workers are human beings too."

Feedback & Suggestions:
- This is a good starting point, but it's a bit general.
- Let's make it more academic and clearly about "upholding human rights."

Possible revision:

> "Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the basic human rights of migrant workers."

Would you like to try revising this one yourself?
Or do you want to use the suggestion above, or adjust it a little?
(Reply with your version or which words you want to keep/change!)

Paragraph 2: PREVENTING EXPLOITATION & SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Current topic sentence:

> "Second, stricter laws are necessary when existing regulations are weak."

Feedback & Suggestions:
- Let's connect directly to "preventing exploitation" and mention social impact.

Possible revision:

> "Secondly, without stricter laws, migrant workers are vulnerable to exploitation and society faces increased risks."

Ready to write your own version, or do you want to adapt my suggestion?

Paragraph 3: ECONOMICS & SOCIAL WELFARE

Current topic sentence:

> "Moreover, our society needs a workforce to promote economic development, which requires stricter laws to guarantee a region's healthy growth."

Feedback & Suggestions:
- Good idea, but a bit long and could be clearer up front.
- Let's connect directly to "economic benefits and social welfare."

Possible revision:

> "In addition, stricter laws benefit the entire economy by supporting migrant workers, who are a vital part of economic growth and social welfare."

Would you like to try revising this topic sentence, or use the suggestion and tweak it?

INSTRUCTIONS:

Please reply with your own new topic sentences, or tell me what you'd like to adjust in my suggestions.

If you're unsure, we can work on just one at a time!

Would you like to try rewriting all three now, or start by choosing which one to focus on first?
Let's do this step by step!

You:

Ok, and let's revise one body paragraph

Assistant:

Excellent! Let's focus our revision on one body paragraph, as you requested. Based on your earlier responses, it sounds like you'd like to work on revising the second body paragraph—the one about preventing exploitation and social problems. If that's not correct, please let me know which paragraph you want to revise! For now, I'll proceed with this paragraph.

Here's Your Current Paragraph:

Secondly, without stricter laws, migrant workers are vulnerable to exploitation and society faces increased risks. Migrant workers suffer from exploitation because of loose rules; if the protections for migrant workers remain inadequate, it may lead to more social issues in the region, such as illegal organ trafficking and other crimes. Thus, this is not just a problem for migrant workers—it's a problem for the entire society. We need stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights, as well as to ensure our society's safety, It's related to all of us.

Step 3: Let's Revise the Paragraph for Clarity, Unity, and Coherence

Guiding Questions

Does each supporting idea clearly relate to your revised topic sentence?

Yes: the main idea is about exploitation and society's risk.

Is your evidence or explanation clear and detailed enough?

"Exploitation" and "illegal organ trafficking and other crimes" are good examples, but can you briefly explain how weak regulations lead to these problems?

- Is there anything repetitive or unclear that could be improved?

- One or two sentences are a bit repetitive; let's condense and clarify.

Suggestions and Interactive Prompts

Let's go sentence by sentence. Here's your revised topic sentence:

"Secondly, without stricter laws, migrant workers are vulnerable to exploitation and society faces increased risks."

1. Next sentence:

"Migrant workers suffer from exploitation because of loose rules; if the protections for migrant workers remain inadequate, it may lead to more social issues in the region, such as illegal organ trafficking and other crimes."

- Feedback: This sentence has good ideas, but it's a bit long. Consider separating it into two clear ideas: (1) How loose rules lead to exploitation, and (2) The consequences for society.

Would you like to try rewriting this into two sentences? For example:
- "When laws are weak or not enforced, employers can pay unfair wages and demand excessive working hours. This creates opportunities for exploitation, and can even encourage serious crimes like illegal organ trafficking."

Would you like to write your own, or adapt this example?

2. Next sentence:

"Thus, this is not just a problem for migrant workers—it's a problem for the entire society."

- Feedback: Great transition! Simple and effective.

Would you like to keep this as is, or rephrase for more formality?
(for example: "Therefore, protecting migrant workers is also vital for the well-being of our entire society.")

3. Last sentence:

"We need stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights, as well as to ensure our society's safety, It's related to all of us."

- Feedback: This nicely wraps up the paragraph, but it's a bit wordy and the two clauses can be joined more smoothly.

- Suggestion: "As a result, enacting stricter laws is not only necessary to protect workers, but also to maintain public safety for everyone."

Your Turn!

Would you like to:
- Try revising the whole paragraph in your own words?
- Respond with one or two sentences at a time, and I'll guide you as you go?
- Or tell me if you want to use/adapt my suggestions?

Let's work together, step by step! If you like, you can reply with your own version of just the second sentence—or rewrite the whole paragraph and I'll offer more feedback.

For Your Reference:

Here's a possible revised version, just for ideas (not to copy, just to inspire!):

Secondly, without stricter laws, migrant workers are vulnerable to exploitation and society faces increased risks. When regulations are weak or poorly enforced, employers may pay unfair wages and force employees to work long hours in unsafe conditions. These abuses can lead to larger social problems, including serious crimes such as illegal organ trafficking. Therefore, protecting migrant workers is not only a matter of justice for individuals, but also essential for maintaining safety and stability in society.

How would you like to proceed?
Whenever you're ready, you can try rewriting one sentence at a time, or the full paragraph. I'm here to guide, encourage, and help you build a strong, clear argument!

You:

revise the first body paragraph

Assistant:

Absolutely! Let's focus on revising your first body paragraph (about human rights) by following the process step by step.

Step 1: Review Your Topic Sentence

Current version (already revised):

> "Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the basic human rights of migrant workers."

This clearly connects to your thesis. Let's keep it for now!

Step 2: Look at the Rest of the Paragraph

Original content for this paragraph:

Even when they first arrive in a new place as guests and cannot receive the same treatment or salaries as locals, they still contribute their labor to the companies they work for. They shouldn't be exploited just because they are not native-born. In this law-based society, human rights should be well safeguarded.

Step 3: Diagnose & Guide

Let's make sure your supporting sentences:
- Stay focused on human rights
- Give clear explanation/examples
- Flow smoothly without repetition

Let's go sentence by sentence!

Sentence 1:

Even when they first arrive in a new place as guests and cannot receive the same treatment or salaries as locals, they still contribute their labor to the companies they work for.

Feedback:
- Good idea: migrant workers are new and get treated differently
- "Guests" is okay, but maybe "newcomers" sounds more neutral/academic
- Consider making the point even clearer: migrant workers deserve equal rights because they contribute to society

Revise prompt:
Would you like to rephrase this sentence?
For example:
- "Although migrant workers are newcomers, they make valuable contributions to their employers and the community."

Sentence 2:

They shouldn't be exploited just because they are not native-born.

Feedback:
- Clear, strong statement! Well done.
- You might add: "This is a fundamental human rights issue."

Sentence 3:

> In this law-based society, human rights should be well safeguarded.

Feedback:
- Nice closing idea for the paragraph.
- Consider: "A society based on laws must protect everyone's human rights, including migrant workers."

Now, Try Revising!

Would you like to:
- Try rewriting one or all sentences yourself?
- Use/adjust any of the sentences above?
- Build your paragraph step by step with my guidance?

Possible Model (For Inspiration Only):

Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the basic human rights of migrant workers. Although migrant workers are newcomers, they make valuable contributions to their employers and to the community. They should not be exploited simply because they are not native-born; this is a fundamental human rights issue. In a law-based society, it is necessary to protect everyone's rights equally, including those of migrant workers.

Your Turn!
Would you like to try combining your ideas and the suggestions into your own revised paragraph?
Or do you want to revise sentence by sentence, and I'll give you hints as you go?

Let me know how you'd like to proceed!

You:

i think your vision is great

Assistant:

Full Revised Essay Draft

The migrant workers are common in the modern world. Many people leave their homeland to seek jobs. But there's a problem: many migrant workers face exploitation due to weak regulations, they endure long working hours and unfair pay. So a question arises: should governments enforce stricter laws to safeguard their rights? Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because this upholds human rights, prevents exploitation, promotes social welfare, and increases economic benefits.

Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the basic human rights of migrant workers. Although migrant workers are newcomers, they make valuable contributions to their employers and to the community. They should not be exploited simply because they are not native-born; this is a fundamental human rights issue. In a law-based society, it is necessary to protect everyone's rights equally, including those of migrant workers.

Secondly, without stricter laws, migrant workers are vulnerable to exploitation and society faces increased risks. When regulations are weak or poorly enforced, employers may pay unfair wages and force employees to work long hours in unsafe conditions. These abuses can lead to larger social problems, including serious crimes such as illegal organ trafficking. Therefore, protecting migrant workers is not only a matter of justice for individuals, but also essential for maintaining safety and stability in society.

In addition, stricter laws benefit the entire economy by supporting migrant workers, who are a vital part of economic growth and social welfare. Migrant workers are not just factory tools or a symbol of "cheap labor". They are part of our economic structure and our society, and their population is growing steadily now. They don't just work here: they live here, pay for goods and services here, and boost the region's GDP. So safeguarding their rights is equivalent to safeguarding the region's development.

Last but not least, the government should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights—not just for their better lives, but also for our better future.

Revised Essay:

Migrant workers are a common feature of the modern world. Many individuals leave their home countries in search of employment opportunities abroad. However, a serious issue persists: numerous migrant workers endure exploitation as a result of inadequate regulations, facing long working hours and unfair wages. This raises an important question: should governments implement stricter laws to safeguard their rights? Governments must enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights because this upholds human rights, prevents exploitation, ensures social welfare, and contributes to economic growth.

Firstly, stricter laws are essential to guarantee the fundamental human rights of migrant workers. Although migrant workers are often newcomers, they make valuable contributions to their employers and to society as a whole. They should not be subjected to exploitation simply because they are foreign-born; such discrimination is fundamentally a human rights violation. In a society governed by the rule of law, it is imperative to protect the rights of all individuals equally, including those of migrant workers.

Secondly, without stronger legal protections, migrant workers remain vulnerable to exploitation and society is exposed to increased risks. When regulations are weak or poorly enforced, employers may offer inadequate pay and impose excessive and unsafe working hours. These abuses can give rise to wider social problems, including serious crimes such as illegal organ trafficking. Therefore, safeguarding the rights of migrant workers is not only a matter of individual justice, but is also crucial for maintaining safety and stability within society.

In addition, enacting and enforcing stricter labor laws strengthens both the economy and social welfare. Migrant workers form an integral part of the workforce that is essential for economic growth. They are not simply a source of "cheap labor"; rather, they actively participate in the local economy by living, consuming goods and services, and contributing to regional GDP. By protecting their rights, governments support sustainable development and the overall prosperity of society.

In conclusion, it is vital that governments implement and uphold stricter legal protections for migrant workers. Doing so not only improves their quality of life, but also secures a more just, stable, and prosperous future for all.
