Contribution Analysis

You've done an excellent job revising your thesis and the first two body paragraphs, especially improving clarity, grammar, and logical flow. Your paragraph 2 revision now clearly links strong labour laws to attracting both migrant workers and responsible employers, enhancing the argument's coherence and academic tone.

Here's the full revised essay with all agreed changes incorporated:

Nowadays, some migrant workers face exploitation in some countries or cities. One reason is bias; for example, some employers may think they do not have the same ability as local workers. Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by limiting excessive working hours, guaranteeing minimum wages, and promoting fair labour practices.

Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby preventing the most common forms of exploitation. By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest, thereby improving their quality of life. If employers do not comply, not only will their employees' quality of life decline, but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties.

If a country enacts strong labour protections, migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are respected. Consequently, this can attract skilled labour, responsible employers, and foreign investment.

It is important for governments to protect their migrant workers by enforcing stricter laws. This can not only help to prevent exploitation, but also enhance a country's international reputation.

Recommendations for your next revision steps:

- Add one brief concrete example (e.g., a country's policy or a relevant statistic) to support your argument, increasing credibility.

- Tighten and vary sentence structures and vocabulary in your conclusion to emphasize the essay's key points with more impact.

- Review the final paragraph and any remaining minor grammar or phrasing issues to polish the academic tone.

Would you like support with: - Drafting that concrete example? - Revising and strengthening the conclusion? - Or focusing on further grammar and vocabulary refinement across your essay?

Feel free to say what you'd prefer!

Grading Result (Hidden from students)

The student completed all three required revision tasks: - Revised the thesis statement — completed. - Revised one topic sentence — completed. - Revised one body paragraph — completed.

STUDENT ASSESSMENT REPORT

Course: LANG 0036 - Enhancing English through Global Citizenship

Module: AI for Revising Essays

ESSAY WRITING ASSESSMENT

Original Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 17/25 - The original states a clear position (governments should act) but ideas are underdeveloped and repetitive. Example: "One reason is bias… It is necessary for governments enforce stricter laws to protect their rights." Lacks development of how laws function or evidence.

- Organization: 15/25 - Paragraphing exists but topic sentences are weak and paragraphs repeat the same points (e.g., reputation paragraph repeats "more people would like to migrate" several times). Logical progression is limited.

- Vocabulary: 14/25 - Simple, repetitive word choice and collocation errors (e.g., "migrant workers right", "longest working hours", "exploate their right").

- Grammar and Sentence Structure: 14/25 - Frequent grammar errors that sometimes impede clarity (missing possessives, verb forms, subject-verb agreement: "governments enforce" → should be "governments should enforce"; "If the employer do not follow").

- Original Essay Total: 60/100

Evidence (original text quotes): - Thesis: "It is necessary for governments enforce stricter laws to protect their rights." - Topic sentence example: "Enforce stricter laws can directly solve the problems." - Repetition and grammar issues: "Protecting these works, not exploate their right can help to enhance international reputation."

Revised Essay Scores:

- Content and Ideas: 21/25 - The revised essay presents clearer, specific reasons (hours, wages, enforcement, reputation) and explains mechanisms (inspections, fines). The thesis previews three reasons and paragraphs address them.

- Organization: 21/25 - Improved topic sentences and paragraph focus. The flow from thesis → solution paragraph → reputation paragraph → conclusion is clearer. Some concluding phrasing could be tightened.

- Vocabulary: 20/25 - Much improved precision and academic phrasing ("maximum working hours," "minimum wage," "labour protections," "skilled labour"), though some word choices and variety could be strengthened further.

- Grammar and Sentence Structure: 20/25 - Major grammar problems were corrected across the first two paragraphs; sentence structures are more accurate and varied. Minor issues remain in the final paragraph and a few stylistic choices could be tightened.

- Revised Essay Total: 82/100

Evidence (revised text quotes): - Revised thesis: "Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by limiting excessive working hours, guaranteeing minimum wages, and promoting fair labour practices." - Revised topic sentence (para 1): "Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby preventing the most common forms of exploitation." - Improved supporting sentences (para 1): "By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest, thereby improving their quality of life. If employers do not comply, not only will their employees' quality of life decline, but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties." - Revised reputation paragraph: "If a country enacts strong labour protections, migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are respected. Consequently, this can attract skilled labour, responsible employers, and foreign investment."

Essay Improvement Analysis:

- Overall Improvement: +22 points

- Key Improvements Made:

- Thesis clarified and made grammatical and specific (now previews three reasons).

- Topic sentence for paragraph 1 revised to align with the thesis and preview the paragraph content.

- Paragraph 1 revised with parallel structure, clearer mechanisms (requirement to pay minimum wage), and enforcement consequences (inspections, fines).

- Missed Opportunities:

- Provide concrete examples or brief evidence (e.g., a policy example, statistic, or real-world case) to strengthen argument credibility.

- Further polish the conclusion (final paragraph still has minor grammatical and stylistic roughness).

- Add more varied sentence structures and higher-register vocabulary in places to reach a stronger academic tone.

HUMAN-AI INTERACTION ASSESSMENT

Chat History Analysis:

- Total Exchanges: 41 messages

- Conversation Quality: Highly iterative, scaffolded tutoring from the AI with frequent student revisions. The exchange includes goal setting, model proposal, student attempts, focused feedback, and multiple small-cycle revisions (thesis → topic sentence → supporting sentences → paragraph 2). The chat shows active student engagement and constructive guidance from the AI.

Interaction Scores:

- In-Depth Conversation: 5/5 - The chat contains an extensive, multi-step revision process (41 turns). The AI and student worked in depth on thesis, topic sentence, and sentence-level edits; the student engaged across multiple stages with detailed follow-ups.

- Evidence: The session covers thesis modeling, student attempts, and iterative fixes with many targeted grammar and structure comments.

- Critical Review of AI Suggestions: 4/5 - The student did not accept all AI text verbatim and chose to try revisions themselves (student picked option B initially). There is active evaluation: the student produced their own versions and used AI feedback to correct them. However, most AI suggestions were accepted or followed rather than being deeply critiqued or rejected with extended justification.

- Evidence: Student wrote own thesis attempts and topic sentence, accepted a model thesis when satisfied, and asked for targeted hints rather than wholesale alternative strategies.

- Refining Process: 5/5 - Clear iterative process with multiple meaningful cycles: initial diagnosis → model thesis → student attempt → AI feedback → student edits → topic sentence rework → sentence-level edits → paragraph 2 rework. Each step included focused revisions and checks.

Evidence: Revisions progressed from thesis to topic sentence to supporting sentences, with the AI providing templates, fragments, and grammatical explanations leading to multiple improved drafts.

Human-AI Interaction Total: 14/15

OVERALL PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Strengths Demonstrated:

- Applied AI feedback effectively: The student integrated model thesis and AI guidance into the revised essay (e.g., the thesis and topic sentence changes).

- Iterative revision skills: The student completed multiple revision cycles and improved sentence-level grammar and paragraph coherence (e.g., corrected parallelism and conditional constructions).

- Clear focus on prioritized goals: The student and AI agreed to focus on thesis clarity and grammar accuracy, and the student followed through on both.

Areas for Improvement:

- Incorporate evidence/examples: Add a brief concrete example, policy name, or statistic to support claims and increase persuasiveness.

- Strengthen conclusion: Make the final paragraph more forceful and varied in sentence structure to better synthesize the essay's arguments.

- Expand vocabulary and academic register: Use more varied and topic-specific vocabulary and stronger transitions for higher-level academic tone.

AI Collaboration Skills Assessment:

- Context Provision: Good — the student provided the essay draft and clear revision goals early in the chat.

- Evidence: Student listed targets ("clarity and focus of the thesis… grammar… stronger academic tone…").

- Strategic Planning: Good — the AI proposed a stepwise revision plan and the student agreed to priorities; the student followed this plan.

- Evidence: Agreement to focus on thesis and grammar, then move to paragraph revisions.

- Critical Evaluation: Good — the student produced own drafts, accepted some AI suggestions, and asked for explanations rather than blindly accepting all advice.

- Evidence: Student chose to attempt thesis and topic sentence drafts before accepting a model thesis; asked targeted grammar questions.

- Independent Editing: Good — the student revised sentences independently multiple times, showing growing competence.

- Evidence: Several student-supplied revised sentences (e.g., corrected parallelism and conditionals).

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

1. Add one concrete piece of evidence (a brief example, statistic, or citation) to support key claims — this will make arguments more persuasive and academically credible.

2. Revise the conclusion to synthesize the three reasons from the thesis and end on a stronger closing statement (avoid repeating earlier phrasing; state the implications clearly).

3. Continue targeted grammar practice on article use and complex sentence structures (e.g., conditionals, not only…but also), and work on varying sentence length and vocabulary to increase rhetorical effect.

INSTRUCTOR NOTES

- The student demonstrated strong engagement with the AI tutor and completed the instructor-requested revision tasks (thesis, topic sentence, and a body paragraph). Their iterative approach and willingness to attempt revisions themselves are pedagogically positive.

- The revised essay shows substantial improvement from the original draft. The remaining steps are mostly higher-level (evidence insertion, nuance, final polish) rather than basic correction.

Assistant:

Hi there! ■ I'm your English writing coach, here to help you strengthen your essay through clear, focused revision. Before we dive in, we'll take a moment to set some goals together.

Here's how our session will work:

Negotiate your targets — We'll start by discussing what you want to improve most in your essay.
Get a quick diagnosis — I'll give you feedback on your essay based on key writing rubrics (like thesis, organization, evidence, and language).
Choose what to focus on — You'll decide which issues you'd like to work on first.
Then we'll move through a structured, three-step revision process:

Step 1: Revise your thesis statement.
Step 2: Choose one body paragraph and refine its topic sentence.
Step 3: Revise the rest of that paragraph for clarity and coherence.
My role is to guide you with questions, feedback, and examples—but you'll always lead the revisions yourself. ■

You:

Revise the thesis statement

Assistant:

Great — I can help with that. Before I revise the thesis, let's do the quick negotiation and diagnosis so we focus the work where you want it.

1) Goals — what would you most like to improve today? (Choose one or two)
- clarity and focus of the thesis (make it answer the question clearly and preview main points)
- grammar and sentence accuracy (remove errors like "governments enforce" → "governments should enforce")
- stronger academic tone and vocabulary
- stronger argument (give reasons that will be developed in the essay)

2) Quick diagnostic feedback (based on your draft and the rubric)
- Strengths: You have a clear position (governments should act). The topic is relevant and consistent.
- Areas to improve: The thesis is grammatically weak and does not preview specific reasons. Paragraphs repeat ideas and need clearer links to a thesis. Vocabulary and sentence structure need polishing for academic tone.

3) Which of the diagnosed issues do you want us to focus on for the thesis revision? (Pick one or two from the list above.)

Once you confirm, please either:
- paste your current thesis again (it looks like: "It is necessary for governments enforce stricter laws to protect their rights."), and then try one short revision yourself; I'll give feedback and encouragement, or
- tell me you'd like me to suggest a clear model thesis right away.

Which do you prefer?

You:

clarity and focus of the thesis (make it answer the question clearly and preview main points)
grammar and sentence accuracy (remove errors like "governments enforce" → "governments should enforce") stronger academic tone and vocabulary
stronger argument

Assistant:

Great — thanks for listing your goals. To use our time well, let's pick 1–2 focused targets for this session (we'll still keep the other goals in mind).

1) Confirm targets
- You listed: clarity/focus of the thesis; grammar/sentence accuracy; stronger academic tone and vocabulary; stronger argument.
- Recommendation: concentrate on (a) clarity and focus of the thesis and (b) grammar and sentence accuracy. These two will give the biggest immediate improvement and make the rest of the essay easier to revise. Do you agree with that, or would you prefer a different pair?

2) Quick diagnostic feedback (short, tied to the rubric)
- Content & Ideas: You have a clear position (governments should act), but the thesis is grammatically weak and doesn't preview specific reasons. Some ideas are repeated rather than developed.
- Organisation & Logical Progression: Paragraphing is present, but topic sentences are weak and paragraphs repeat the same points. Transitions and logical links to a clear thesis are needed.
- Vocabulary: Word choice is simple and repetitive; some collocation problems (e.g., "migrant workers right" → "migrant workers' rights").
- Grammar & Sentence Structure: Frequent grammar errors (verb forms, subject-verb agreement, articles) and awkward phrasing (e.g., "governments enforce" → "governments should enforce"; "If the employer do not follow" → "If employers do not comply").

3) Decide priorities
- Which two targets do you want us to focus on now? (Please confirm: I recommended thesis clarity + grammar, but you can choose any two.)

Step 1 — Thesis revision (ready when you are)
- Please paste your current thesis (I have: "It is necessary for governments enforce stricter laws to protect their rights.") and then try one short revision now.
- Hints to help you rewrite:
- Directly answer the question: "Should governments enforce stricter laws…?" Start with "Yes, governments should…" or "Governments should…"
- Preview the main reasons (2–3) in brief: e.g., protect wages and working hours; provide legal enforcement and oversight; improve national reputation/economic fairness.
- Use confident, precise phrasing and correct grammar (e.g., "governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by X, Y, and Z.")
- Would you like to try rewriting the thesis now? If you prefer, say "Model please" and I'll give one model thesis after you attempt.

You:

Model please

Assistant:

Great — I'll focus on clarity/focus of the thesis and grammar/sentence accuracy unless you tell me otherwise. Here is a clear, confident model thesis that answers the question and previews three main reasons you can develop in the essay:

Model thesis:
Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by (1) limiting excessive working hours and guaranteeing minimum wages, (2) strengthening enforcement and penalties for abusive employers, and (3) promoting fair labour practices that improve both worker welfare and the country's international reputation.

Do you feel happy with that thesis, or would you like a shorter version? If you're satisfied, tell me which body paragraph you want to work on (the first paragraph is a good choice). Also tell me whether you want me to insert this thesis into your full essay now — if you do, I'll show the full revised text with the new thesis included.

You:

(1) limiting excessive working hours and guaranteeing minimum wages, and (3) promoting fair labour practices that improve both worker welfare and the country's international reputation.

Assistant:

Nice work so far — you've picked good targets. Quick summary and next step:

1) Confirmed targets
- Primary: clarity and focus of the thesis.
- Secondary: grammar and sentence accuracy.
(We'll keep tone and stronger argument in mind but focus on those two.)

2) Short diagnosis tied to those targets
- Strength: clear position that governments must act.
- Main fixes needed: make the thesis grammatically correct and preview the specific reasons; remove hedging and awkward phrasing (e.g., "governments enforce" → "governments should enforce"; "migrant workers right" → "migrant workers' rights").

3) Choices for Step 1
- I gave a model thesis earlier. Would you like to:
A) Use the model thesis as-is (I'll insert it into your essay), or
B) Try rewriting the thesis yourself now (I'll give feedback), or
C) Ask me for a shorter version of the model first?

Also: which body paragraph would you like to revise in Steps 2–3? I recommend the first body paragraph (about laws solving the problems), but you can choose paragraph 2 or the conclusion paragraph if you prefer.

Tell me:
- A, B, or C for the thesis, and
- Which paragraph number to work on.

When you confirm, I'll proceed. If you pick A, I'll insert the corrected thesis into your essay and then we'll move to the topic sentence for your chosen paragraph.

You:

revise the first body paragraph. I pick B

Assistant:

Great — thanks for choosing B and for picking the first body paragraph to revise later. Quick recap and then your turn.

Confirmed targets:
- Primary: clarity and focus of the thesis.
- Secondary: grammar and sentence accuracy.
Paragraph choice for Steps 2–3: paragraph 1 (the paragraph about laws directly solving problems).

Now please paste your current thesis (you had: "It is necessary for governments enforce stricter laws to protect their rights.") and try one short revision now.

Hints to help your rewrite (keep the sentence short and confident):
- Start with a clear statement: "Governments should…" or "Yes — governments should…"
- Use correct grammar: migrant workers' rights (with apostrophe), "should enforce," "by" or "to" + reasons.
- Preview 2–3 main reasons in brief (e.g., limiting hours and guaranteeing wages; stronger enforcement and penalties; improving reputation and fairness).
- Keep it one sentence and avoid hedging (no "I think," "maybe").

Try now — write your revised thesis in one sentence. I'll give quick, specific feedback and encouragement, then we'll confirm it before moving to the topic sentence for paragraph 1.

You:

Nowadays, migrant workers face exploitation in some countries or cities. Therefore, government should stricter laws to protect their rights by limited working hours, guaranteed minimum wages and promoted fair labour practices.

Assistant:

Nice attempt — good work trying to put your reasons into the thesis. Quick, specific feedback first, then a clean model you can use or revise.

What works in your sentence
- You give clear reasons (working hours, wages, fair practices) — that's exactly what a thesis should preview.
- It's a confident statement that answers the question.

What to fix (short list)
- Grammar and form: use plural "governments" and the verb form "should enforce."
- Possessive: "migrant workers' rights" needs an apostrophe.
- Parallel structure: make the list of reasons grammatically parallel (e.g., limiting, guaranteeing, promoting).
- Tone: remove "Therefore" from the thesis (it's fine in a transition sentence, but the thesis should be direct).

Model (corrected) thesis you can use or edit:
Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by limiting excessive working hours, guaranteeing minimum wages, and promoting fair labour practices.

Do you want to:
A) Use that sentence as your final thesis (I'll insert it into the essay and we'll move on), or
B) Try one more quick revision yourself now?

If B, please paste your new one-sentence thesis. If A, confirm and then paste the topic sentence from the first body paragraph (your paragraph about laws solving problems) so we can work on Step 2.

You:

A, the topic sentence from the first body: Enforce stricter laws can directly solve the problems.

Assistant:

Great — thanks for confirming. I've inserted the model thesis into your essay (below). First, a quick check: are you happy with that thesis? If yes, we'll move on to Step 2 and work on the topic sentence you gave.

Full essay with the new thesis inserted:

Nowadays, some migrant workers face exploitation in some countries or cities. One reason is bias, for example, some employers may think they do not have the same ability as local workers. Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by limiting excessive working hours, guaranteeing minimum wages, and promoting fair labour practices.

Enforce stricter laws can directly solve the problems. Laws can let more companies protect their migrant workers right as laws can set the longest working hours and the minimum salary that should pay by the employer. If the employer do not follow, it can be illegal. It can help to safeguard their right.

Enforce stricter laws can help to enhance reputation. As a result, more people would like to migrate to the place and more migrants worker would like to work there. If there has a good stricter laws safeguard the migrant workers more migrant people would like to work there. Also, more people would like to migrate to this city or country to work. Protecting these works, not exploate their right can help to enhance international reputation.

It is important for governments to protect their migrants workers by enforced stricter laws. It can not only help to solve exploitation, but also enhance the international reputation.

Step 2 — Topic sentence feedback (your sentence: "Enforce stricter laws can directly solve the problems.")
- What's good: It links to your thesis idea that laws are a solution — clear intention.
- What to fix:
- Grammar/word form: use a proper subject/verb form. "Enforce" is an imperative verb; use "Enforcing" or "Enforcing stricter laws" or "Stricter laws can…"
- Precision: replace vague "the problems" with "migrant worker exploitation" or a specific problem from your thesis (e.g., "excessive hours and unfair pay").
- Stronger connection to thesis: mention the specific way laws help (hours, wages, enforcement) or at least signal that this paragraph will explain one of those reasons.

Try revising the topic sentence now. Hints and short templates you can adapt (pick one and finish it in your own words):
- Template A: "Enforcing stricter laws can directly reduce migrant worker exploitation by …"
- Template B: "Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by limiting excessive working hours and ensuring minimum wages."
- Template C (more focused): "By setting maximum working hours and minimum wages, stricter laws can prevent the most common forms of exploitation."

Would you like to:
- Try rewriting the topic sentence now? (Paste your sentence and I'll give quick feedback), or
- Ask me to pick one of the templates and insert it into the essay for you?

Once your topic sentence is ready and we both agree, we'll move to Step 3 and work on improving the supporting sentences in that paragraph (I'll guide you with focused questions and short suggestions). Which would you like to do?

You:

Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby prevent the most common forms of exploitation."

Assistant:

Nice work — that topic sentence already connects clearly to your thesis and previews the paragraph's focus. Quick, specific feedback so you can tighten it:

- What's strong: It names the exact protections (working hours, minimum wages), so readers know what the paragraph will explain. Good alignment with your thesis.

- What to fix: There's a small grammar problem: "thereby prevent" should be "thereby preventing." Also check parallel wording (e.g., "setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages" is fine) and keep the wording close to your thesis (you used "limiting excessive working hours" there).

I'll offer one corrected version you can use or adapt:
Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby preventing the most common forms of exploitation.

Would you like to:
- Accept that sentence as your final topic sentence (I'll then guide Step 3 on improving the rest of the paragraph), or
- Try one more quick revision yourself now? (If so, paste it and I'll give brief feedback.)

When you're ready for Step 3, I'll help you revise the supporting sentences in that paragraph with focused, short prompts such as:
- Do each of your supporting sentences clearly explain how laws limit hours or guarantee pay?
- Do you give a concrete example or explain the enforcement mechanism (fines, inspections, legal recourse)?
- Are any sentences repetitive or unclear and need tightening or added detail?

Try choosing one supporting sentence from the paragraph to revise first (paste it here), and I'll prompt you with one small, specific improvement suggestion.

You:

Step 3

Assistant:

Good — we're almost done with the first paragraph. Quick recap: we agreed on the thesis and I suggested this topic sentence:

Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby preventing the most common forms of exploitation.

Do you want to keep that topic sentence as-is? (Yes / No / I'll tweak it)

Step 3 — revising the rest of the chosen paragraph
Please paste one supporting sentence from the first body paragraph that you want to improve. Pick one sentence (not the whole paragraph) — for example, one of these from your draft:
- "Laws can let more companies protect their migrant workers right as laws can set the longest working hours and the minimum salary that should pay by the employer."
- "If the employer do not follow, it can be illegal."

When you paste the sentence, I'll do two things:
1) Ask one or two focused questions to check whether the sentence clearly supports the topic sentence.
2) Give a short, actionable hint you can use to revise it (I'll not rewrite the whole sentence for you).

Here are quick guiding questions you can already think about as you choose a sentence:

- Does this sentence clearly explain how laws limit hours or guarantee pay?

- Is there an example, mechanism, or consequence (e.g., inspections, fines, legal recourse) that would make the claim more concrete?

- Is the sentence grammatically correct and free of repetition?

- Could two short sentences be combined or split for clarity?

Two short revision strategies you might try (pick one):

- Add a concrete enforcement detail (fill in: "for example, _____ such as regular inspections and fines") to show how laws work in practice.

- Tighten grammar and remove repetition (focus on correct verb forms, possessives: migrant workers' rights, plural/singular agreement).

Would you like to:

A) Paste one supporting sentence now for targeted feedback and a hint?

B) Ask me to suggest a short fragment you can add (I'll give a brief fragment, not a full rewrite)?

C) Confirm the topic sentence and move on to the next paragraph later?

Go ahead and paste one sentence — I'll respond with a quick question and one clear hint so you can try the revision.

You:

Laws can let more companies protect their migrant workers right as laws can set the longest working hours and the minimum salary that should pay by the employer. Does this sentence clearly explain how laws limit hours or guarantee pay?

Assistant:

Short answer: Not yet — the sentence has the right idea but doesn't clearly or correctly explain how laws would limit hours or guarantee pay.

Quick, specific problems

- Grammar/word choice: "migrant workers right" needs an apostrophe (migrant workers' rights). "Laws can let more companies protect" is awkward — "let" is the wrong verb.

- Awkward phrases: "longest working hours" should be "maximum working hours" or "limit working hours."

- Word order and verbs: "the minimum salary that should pay by the employer" is ungrammatical — we need "require employers to pay at least the minimum wage," or similar.

- Clarity: the sentence repeats ideas and doesn't explain how the law would be enforced or what consequence follows if employers don't comply.

Two small revision strategies you can try

1) Tighten grammar and split into two short sentences: one says what the law does (sets max hours, guarantees min wage); the second names the enforcement or consequence (inspections, fines, legal recourse).

2) Keep it one sentence but add a clear verb and an enforcement phrase (e.g., "require employers to pay" + "subject to fines/inspections").

Useful fragments you can insert (not full sentences — adapt them)

- "migrant workers' rights"

- "by setting maximum working hours and guaranteeing a minimum wage"

- "and requiring employers to pay at least the legal minimum"

- "with non■compliance subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties"

Want to try now? Paste your revised sentence and I'll give quick feedback and one final hint. You're doing well — this is exactly the kind of targeted fix that will make the paragraph much clearer.

You:

Setting maximum working hours and require employers to pay at least the minimum wage ensure workers have enough income and rest, thereby improving their quality of life.

Assistant:

Good progress — this sentence is close. Quick, specific feedback so you can fix it yourself.

What to correct
- Parallel structure: "Setting … and require …" is not parallel. Change "require" to "requiring" (or make both base verbs + subject).
- Verb agreement/clarity: decide whether the subject is singular or plural. Using "By …, governments can ensure …" is a clear way to avoid agreement issues.
- Word choice and formality: use "the minimum wage" or "a minimum wage" and consider "adequate income" instead of "enough income."
- Small style: "rest" is okay, but "sufficient rest" or "adequate rest" sounds more academic.

Two short revision strategies (pick one)
1) Fix the gerunds so the structure is parallel: replace "require" with "requiring" and keep "ensure that …"
- Useful fragments to insert: "requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage" and "ensure that workers receive an adequate income and sufficient rest."

2) Make the subject explicit (safer for grammar): start with "By …, governments can ensure that …"
- Useful fragment: "By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay the legal minimum wage," + "governments can ensure that workers receive an adequate income and sufficient rest."

Would you like to try one of these now? Paste your revised sentence and I'll give one quick final tweak.

You:

By setting maximum working hours and require employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure workers have adequate income and rest, thereby improving their quality of life. If the employer with non■compliance, not only their employee's quality of life will decrease but themselves will also subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties.

Assistant:

Nice work — your ideas are clear and you've moved toward more accurate grammar. A few focused fixes will make these two sentences correct and stronger. I'll point out the specific problems and give small fragments you can use to rebuild each sentence. Would you like to try another revision now? Paste your new versions and I'll give a quick tweak.

Sentence 1 problems and quick fixes
- Parallelism: "By setting … and require …" must be parallel. Use two -ing forms (setting … and requiring) or recast the clause.
- Clarity: add "that" or "so that" optionally after "ensure" to be slightly more formal.
- Style: "adequate income and rest" is good; "thereby improving their quality of life" is fine but optional.

Useful fragments to combine (pick and join them)
- "By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage,"
- "governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest,"
- "thereby improving their quality of life."

Try assembling a sentence from those fragments and paste it here.

Sentence 2 problems and quick fixes
- Conditional form: "If the employer with non■compliance" is ungrammatical. Use "If employers do not comply," or "If an employer fails to comply,"
- Plural/possessive: "their employee's quality of life" → "their employees' quality of life."
- Word order with "not only … but also": use correct inversion/ordering ("not only will X happen, but Y will also happen").
- Clarity: "themselves will also subject to inspections" → need verb: "will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties."

Useful fragments to combine
- "If employers do not comply,"
- "their employees' quality of life will decline,"
- "but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties."

Try combining those fragments into one sentence (you can use the "not only … but also …" structure if you like). Paste your version and I'll give a final quick tweak. You're very close — just small grammar and ordering fixes left.

You:

By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest, thereby improving their quality of life.If employers do not comply, not only their employees' quality of life will decline, but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties."

Assistant:

Nice work — you've made the paragraph much clearer. Quick, encouraging notes before the full revised text:

What I fixed (small, focused changes)
- Added a missing space after the period between the two sentences.
- Fixed parallel structure and verb forms so the first sentence reads smoothly.
- Corrected the conditional and the "not only … but also" ordering in the second sentence.
- Kept your ideas and phrasing but made the grammar and punctuation accurate.

If you want to try another small change yourself, you can. Otherwise this version keeps your meaning and reads clearly.

Here are the two corrected sentences you wrote (you can copy them or tweak further):
- By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest, thereby improving their quality of life.
- If employers do not comply, not only will their employees' quality of life decline, but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties.

Full revised essay with those changes included:

Nowadays, some migrant workers face exploitation in some countries or cities. One reason is bias, for example, some employers may think they do not have the same ability as local workers. Governments should enforce stricter laws to protect migrant workers' rights by limiting excessive working hours, guaranteeing minimum wages, and promoting fair labour practices.

Stricter labour laws can protect migrant workers by setting maximum working hours and ensuring minimum wages, thereby preventing the most common forms of exploitation. By setting maximum working hours and requiring employers to pay at least the minimum wage, governments can ensure that workers have adequate income and sufficient rest, thereby improving their quality of life. If employers do not comply, not only will their employees' quality of life decline, but employers will also be subject to inspections, fines, or legal penalties.

Enforce stricter laws can help to enhance reputation. As a result, more people would like to migrate to the place and more migrants worker would like to work there. If there has a good stricter laws safeguard the migrant workers more migrant people would like to work there. Also, more people would like to migrate to this city or country to work. Protecting these works, not exploate their right can help to enhance international reputation.

It is important for governments to protect their migrants workers by enforced stricter laws. It can not only help to solve exploitation, but also enhance the international reputation.

Would you like to:
- Accept this version and move on to paragraph 2, or
- Try one more quick tweak to the two sentences yourself (paste your edit), or
- Ask me to suggest one small improvement to the second paragraph (I'll only give a short hint)?

Your call — you've done great so far.

You:

suggest one small improvement to the second paragraph

Assistant:

Great — good to see you focusing on the next paragraph. Quick note: we agreed to concentrate on the thesis and the first body paragraph in this session, so I'll keep this suggestion very small and actionable so you can apply it yourself.

One small improvement to paragraph 2 (the reputation paragraph)
- Main idea: tighten the opening sentence so it is grammatical and directly links reputation to attracting migrants and investment; then remove repetitive sentences that repeat the same idea.
- Concrete change you can make now: replace the paragraph's first line with a clearer version and then merge two repeating sentences into one. For example, you could use a short, direct opening like: Enforcing stricter labour laws can improve a country's international reputation and attract more migrant workers. After that, delete or combine the repeat sentences that say "more people would like to migrate" twice.
- Why this helps: a clearer topic sentence signals the paragraph's purpose, and removing repetition makes the paragraph more concise and stronger academically.

Would you like to try editing that paragraph now and paste your revision here? I'll give one quick targeted tweak. If you prefer, I can also revise the whole paragraph for you in a follow-up session — just say so.

You:

Enforcing stricter labour laws can enhance a country's international reputation and attract more migrant workers.

Assistant:

Nice revision — well done. That sentence is clear, direct, and grammatical, and it fixes the repetition and awkward phrasing in the original paragraph opener.

Quick, tiny suggestions (optional)
- If you want a slightly stronger academic tone, you could replace "more migrant workers" with "migrant workers and foreign investment" or "migrants seeking fair treatment," depending on what you plan to explain next. Both give a clearer cause/effect link for the paragraph.
- Keep an eye on repetition later in the paragraph: you can say the idea once and then give one concrete reason or example (e.g., "companies prefer places with fair laws" or "countries with stronger protections attract skilled labour").

Next step — pick one option
A) Keep working on paragraph 1 (we already revised it) and finish the essay later.
B) Switch focus to paragraph 2 now — I will help you improve this paragraph's supporting sentences. If you choose B, do you want me to:
1) Insert your new topic sentence into the full essay now and show the updated essay, or
2) Give a short hint for revising the supporting sentences in paragraph 2 so you can try them yourself?

Tell me which option you choose (A or B). If B, also say whether you want 1 or 2. If you prefer, paste one sentence from paragraph 2 you want to improve and I'll give a single focused question and hint.

You:

B Enforcing stricter labour laws can enhance a country's international reputation and attract more migrants seeking fair treatment.

Assistant:

Nice choice — switching to paragraph 2 is fine. Quick confirmation: we're keeping the thesis you approved and now focusing on paragraph 2 (its topic sentence and one supporting sentence).

Your new topic sentence is strong:
Enforcing stricter labour laws can enhance a country's international reputation and attract more migrants seeking fair treatment.

Short feedback (tiny tweaks you can consider)
- Very clear and linked to the thesis.
- To match earlier wording, you could use "migrant workers" instead of "migrants" if you prefer consistency.
- If you plan to mention businesses or investment, you might add "and ethical employers" later in the paragraph.

Step 3 — revise one supporting sentence
Please paste one supporting sentence from paragraph 2 that you want to improve (pick a single sentence, not the whole paragraph). When you paste it, I'll:
1) Ask 1–2 focused questions about how it supports the topic sentence.
2) Give one short, actionable hint (with brief fragments you can add) so you can revise it yourself.

Quick guiding questions to choose which sentence to paste:
- Does this sentence explain exactly how reputation leads to more migrants or investment? (If not, pick it.)
- Does it give a concrete example or mechanism (e.g., employers, investors, international ratings)? (If not, pick it.)
- Is it repetitive or vague? (If yes, pick it.)

Useful short fragments you can add later (not full rewrites — adapt them):
- "which signals to migrant workers and ethical employers that rights are respected"
- "encouraging skilled workers and responsible companies to relocate"
- "and attracting foreign investment and tourism"

Go ahead — paste one sentence from paragraph 2 and I'll give a focused question and one clear hint so you can edit it.

You:

If there has a good stricter laws safeguard the migrant workers more migrant people would like to work there.

Assistant:

Good — this sentence is exactly the right one to work on. A couple of quick questions to clarify your meaning:

1) Do you mean the laws will attract more migrant workers, or both migrant workers and ethical employers/investors? (Pick one so the sentence can be specific.)
2) Do you want to explain why migrants would come (e.g., better pay, legal protection, safer working conditions), or leave that for the next sentence?

One short, actionable hint (use a conditional or participle phrase and simpler phrasing):
- Start with a clear condition: "If a country enacts strong labour protections," or "With strong labour protections,"
- Use "migrant workers" (not "migrant people") and a clear verb: "are more likely to choose to work there" or "will be more likely to move there."
- Optionally add a short reason fragment: "because it signals that workers' rights are respected" or "thereby attracting skilled workers and responsible employers."

Small fragments you can mix and match (do not paste them all as one sentence — combine as you prefer):
- "If a country enacts strong labour protections,"
- "migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there"
- "because it signals that workers' rights are respected"
- "thereby attracting skilled labour and responsible employers."

Would you like to try rewriting the sentence now? Paste your new version and I'll give a very quick tweak. You're almost there — great progress.

You:

If a country enforces stricter laws and have strong labour protections, migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are valued and respected by the local government. Therefore, it can attract skilled labour to work and responsible employers to come to establish their company.

Assistant:

Nice work — your sentences clearly explain the idea and you gave a cause (strong laws) and effects (migrants and employers come). A few quick questions, then one short set of hints so you can try a tighter revision:

Questions
1) Do you mean only migrant workers will be attracted, or both migrant workers and responsible employers/investors? (Pick which so the sentence can be specific.)
2) Do you want this to be two sentences (condition → effect; then consequence) or one sentence with a participle/thereby phrase? (Either is fine — tell me which.)

Short, focused fixes to try (do not paste the whole sentence back — use these fragments to rebuild)
- Grammar: fix subject–verb agreement. Change "and have" to "and has" — or better, use "enacts" / "has" / "puts in place".
- Simpler phrasing: replace "are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are valued and respected by the local government" with shorter fragments you can combine.
- Word choice: prefer "migrant workers" and "skilled labour" or "responsible employers" — avoid "migrant people" and "establish their company."

Useful fragments you can mix (pick and combine)
- "If a country enacts strong labour protections,"
- "migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there"
- "because it signals that workers' rights are respected"
- "thereby attracting skilled labour and responsible employers"
- "and encouraging foreign investment"

Would you like to try revising those two sentences now using these fragments? Paste your new version and I'll give one quick final tweak. When you're happy, I'll insert it into the full essay.

You:

If a country enforces stricter laws and has strong migrant labour protections, migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are valued and respected by the local government. Therefore, it can attract skilled labour, responsible employers and encourage foreign investment.

Assistant:

Nice work — these sentences show a clear cause/effect idea and link well to your topic sentence. A few quick questions and then a couple of short, actionable hints so you can tidy them up yourself.

Quick questions
1) Do you want this to say the laws attract only migrant workers, or both migrant workers and responsible employers/investors? (Pick one so the sentence can be more specific.)
2) Do you prefer one sentence with a linking word (thereby/therefore), or two short sentences (condition → effect; consequence)? Either is fine.

Focused hints (use these small fragments to rebuild — don't paste them all at once)
- Avoid redundancy in the condition: use one clear phrase, e.g. "If a country enacts strong labour protections," or "With strong migrant labour protections,"
- Tighten the effect: prefer "migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there" (not "migrant people")
- Fix the pronoun and flow in the second idea: use "This can attract …" or "Consequently, it can attract …" rather than "Therefore, it can…"
- Make the final list parallel: either "attract skilled labour, responsible employers, and foreign investment" or "attract skilled labour and responsible employers, and encourage foreign investment."

Useful fragments you can combine
- "If a country enacts strong labour protections,"
- "migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there"
- "because it signals that workers' rights are respected"
- "This can attract skilled labour, responsible employers, and foreign investment."

Would you like to try revising those two sentences now using these fragments? Paste your revision and I'll give one quick final tweak — then, if you're happy, I'll insert it into the full essay for you.

You:

the laws attract both migrant workers and responsible employers/investors?
I prefer two short sentences

Assistant:

Great choice — two short sentences will make the idea clear and easy to develop. Based on your preference (laws attract both migrant workers and responsible employers/investors; two short sentences), here are two concise options you can use:

- If a country enacts strong labour protections, migrant workers are more likely to choose to work there because it signals that workers' rights are respected.

- Consequently, this can attract skilled labour, responsible employers, and foreign investment.

Would you like to tweak the wording (for example, replace "migrant workers" with "migrants" or add a specific example)? If not, I've inserted those two sentences into your essay below and included the full revised text.

Full revised essay (with the new thesis and paragraph 1 & 2 revisions included):

Next steps (pick one)
- Accept these sentences and the revised essay as-is, and move on to polishing paragraph 2 supporting details or the conclusion.
- Tweak the two sentences (tell me which word or idea you want changed), and I'll insert your version and show the full essay again.
- Focus next on grammar and sentence accuracy across the whole essay.
